Norris Denounces Ford Shoals Bid As "Cinch"

NEBRASKAN RAPS ALL CORPORATION OFFERS FOR PLANT

Suggestion for Impartial Engineering Report on Properties Wins Favor in Senate Committee.

ACTION TO PREVENT DETERIORATION URGED

Norris Declares Acceptance of Ford Bid Would Be Unwarranted Gift of Public Property.

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Washington, May 9.—Henry Ford's proposed contract for development of the government properties at Muscle Shoals, Ala., was attacked by Chairman Norris, of the senate agricultural committee, who said it was a "cinch" and an "unconscionable contract," adding that it could be taken to Wall street if accepted by congress, and an advance of 1,000 per cent would be made upon it as a valuable contract and concession.

The Nebraska senator's criticism was the outstanding feature of the committee's investigation of the private proposals for Muscle Shoals, pending for acceptance before congress, and was made during the afternoon examination of Gray Silver, Washington representative of the American farm bureau federation. Mr. Silver urged acceptance of the Ford offer on the ground that it would reduce the cost of fertilizer for the farmers and aid agriculture generally. At the morning session the committee heard Dr. William McClellan, of New York, president of the American Institute of Electric Engineers, who submitted two definite recommendations regarding the future treatment of the Muscle Shoals projects.

The Nebraska member declared that "no corporation" would get the Muscle Shoals properties with his consent.

"That applies to any damn corporation," the senator exclaimed. "Don't care if it's Ford's or any other."

Raps Corporations.

Turning to Silver, the senator then said:

"You know that if Rockefeller or the International Harvester company was making the same proposition Ford makes," he continued, "you would be here condemning it, charging that congress was giving away the people's property to a corporation.

"Your corporation won't be any better than Rockefeller's. You know Ford will die and this corporation will be just the same as any other.

"Why," he exclaimed, "you could take the Ford offer to Wall street and get an advance of a 1,000 per cent on it as a valuable contract, if it was accepted."

The senator referred to a report made by a committee created by the American Farm Bureau Federation in May, 1921, advocating government operation of the Muscle Shoals plants and opposing their sale.

Questions Change.

"Why did you change?" Senator Norris asked, "and come here now asking that we accept Mr. Ford's contract?"

"That report was made before Mr. Ford made his offer," replied Mr. Silver.

"The answer caused the senator then to declare that if he was "half as suspicious" as some persons he would charge that the federation "had sold out to Ford.

"But," he continued, "I don't think that."

"It's a Cinch."

"We are giving away something," Senator Norris continued. "No corporation ever got a more unconscionable contract. You can't regulate this corporation any more than any other.

"We will be condemned by future generations just like those are being now condemned who gave away lands to corporations in the past. Its a cinch and I do not propose that any corporation shall get Muscle Shoals with my consent.

Congressional action to protect the existing construction and equipment at Muscle Shoals from deterioration was urged, an appropriation of $7,500,000 to initiate construction work for a year on the Wilson dam being suggested as part of this program. It was also recommended that an engineering board of review be organized by the senate agriculture and the house military bodies to recommend to the committees a general plan of procedure to be followed in connection with Muscle Shoals.

INTEREST GROWS IN HOME SHOW AT AUDITORIUM

Clubwomen of City to Be in Charge of Program of Exposition Today—Tuesday "Taxpayers' Day."

HADEN IS SPEAKER ON ECONOMY SYSTEM

Voices Appeal for Standardized Budget Bill to Be Brought Before Next General Assembly.

The "own your home" exposition of the Atlanta real estate board opens its third day Wednesday with a record of success for the first two days that has eclipsed any similar exposition ever held in this city. After 10,000 people witnessed the opening on Monday night, thousands more came back on Tuesday, more than 2,000 registering during the day, and still other thousands more were on hand for the evening show.

Wednesday is to be "Woman's Club day," and the ladies of the city will be special guests throughout the day and evening. The Woman's club has completed its handsome exhibit in the center of the building, and it is now a combination rest nook for weary visitors and also a demonstration of the work of the home economics department of the club.

All during the day and evening, members of the club will be on hand to act as official hostesses. Mrs. J. A. Carlisle is in charge, and will be assisted by Mrs. T. G. Delph and Mrs. Alexander. The famous Woman's club cookbook will also be on exhibit, and many of the Atlanta food dealers who have advertised in this book will have exhibits of food products in the booth.

Taxpayers' Day.

Tuesday was "taxpayers' day" at the Auditorium, the chief feature of the program being an address in the evening by Charles J. Haden, well-known tax expert. The subject of his address was "The Responsibility of a Taxpayer."

In the course of his remarks, he stated that while property assessments are on an ad valorem basis, he felt that it was the duty of tax assessors to defend the little home owner and to give the man of modest means who owns his home as light a levy as possible, in the interest of good citizenship and the increase in home owners.

Referring to the waste in county finances, Mr. Haden said, in part:

"It is safe to estimate that the counties lose between two million and four million dollars a year in the aggregate in Georgia because of an out-of-date law. They are strictly required to meet each year's budget with that year's income. They must wait until December 20 for taxes to be paid, thus operating eleven months and twenty days on credit. For lack of a budget system and regular auditing, by which the business public may be governed in dealing with the counties, and the possibility that if the creditor should be left over unpaid for reason of a shortage in finances, his claim would have to undergo a dividend payment plan of four years as the law provides, dealers in county supplies add to their prices enough to cover such emergencies. A county properly is a better credit risk than any private concern can be, and yet, by reason of the clumsy system they pay in the aggregate two million dollars or more every year for their supplies than a first-class business concern would need to pay. The county authorities under the best conditions are handicapped by a defective law.

RUSSIAN ANSWER TO ALLIED NOTE EXPECTED TODAY

Genoa Conference Passes Uneasy Day Speculating on Probable Nature of Soviet Reply.

BUT HOPE IS GROWING FOR FAVORABLE TONE

Believe Way Will Be Left Open for Continuance of Parley by Bolshevik Delegates.

BY RALPH H. TURNER.

Genoa, May 9.—Leaders of the Genoa conference are waiting impatiently for Russia's reply to the allied memorandum while the soviet delegates are drafting their answer as leisurely as if they did not know the gathering is marking time until their attitude is revealed.

Informal conversations are going on among Lloyd George and other delegates, who are discussing various contingencies that may arise out of the soviet answer. But all admit that nothing decisive can be done until it is known what the Russians are willing to do about the allied proposals, and the activities of the conference are therefore virtually suspended.

Reply Delayed.

The allied leaders had originally expected the Russian reply Monday. Then they learned it would not be ready before Tuesday. Now it has been postponed until Wednesday, and as a matter of fact, the Russians are in no hurry to answer, recalling that it took the allies a week or more to agree on the proposal.

There may not be a reply until Tchitcherin's note to Foreign Minister Schanzer, of Italy, is answered. Tchitcherin, apparently as a dilatory measure, asked Schanzer if France had yet approved the allied memorandum, recalling that the letter of transmittal explained that France was reserving her approval.

"If she has not approved it, what governments have?" the soviet delegate asked. This note could hardly be viewed as a bona fide request for information, but thus far none of the allied leaders have raised any objection to the delay caused by Tchitcherin's inquiry.

Rejection Not Expected.

It is still predicted here that Russia's reply will endeavor to conciliate the allies by not flatly rejecting the proposals.

The bolsheviki, it is thought, are too clever to reject the memorandum outright and thus incur the odium of having blocked the conference by refusing the only proposition the allies could agree on. Instead, it is expected that the soviet reply will

BANK PRESIDENT SENT TO GANG

Dawsonville Banker Pleads Guilty to Forgery. Other Indictments Pending Against Him.

Gainesville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—At the adjourned term of Dawson superior court, at Dawsonville, today, Hoyt Brannon, former president and cashier of the defunct Farmers and Citizens bank, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging forgery, and was sentenced to serve from seven to nine years on the chaingang. He has been assigned to Hall county, and will begin serving his sentence tomorrow.

This indictment is one of several pending against him in connection with the bank's failure, over a year ago. All officers and directors of the bank are under indictment. All cases connected with deposits have been transferred to Hall superior court, as no jury could be secured in Dawson county; but several more cases against Brannon and the other officers, involving forgery and fraudulent statements, remain to be tried in that county at the next term of court, the present term having adjourned.

Is Fined Five Cents At Liquor Hearing; Didn't Have Money

Newark, N. J., May 9.—A fine of 5 cents was levied against Steve Madura, charged with transporting a half-pint of liquor.

"How long have you been in jail awaiting hearing?" asked Federal Judge Lynch.

"Five weeks," replied Madura.

"You've suffered enough, but I've got to fine you," the court said. "Pay a nickel."

Madura didn't have that much money.

So the judge paid the fine.

FAILURE TO VOTE KILLS PROPOSED ISSUE OF BONDS

Practically No Opposition to $500,000 School Issue Develops—Only 119 Votes Against Move.

SIMMONS ATTACKS LAW ON ELECTIONS

Says Majority of Registration Provision and Voting Hours Meant Death of Bonds—Voting Light.

Due to failure of a majority of the registered voters of Fulton county to cast their ballots in the special county school bond election held Tuesday, the proposed half-million-dollar school bond issue was lost, it was announced L. County Superintendent J. W. Simmons late Tuesday afternoon.

While no opposition to the bond issue developed, the fact that the vote was extremely light meant defeat of the proposed issue for school improvement and maintenance purposes.

Approximately 3,600 people were qualified to vote, and with but two precincts unheard from Tuesday night, the vote stood as follows: For bonds, 1,190; against bonds, 119. As 1,800 votes was necessary to constitute a majority, the election was lost by over 500 votes.

In admitting defeat for the bond issue, Professor Simmons declared the the majority of citizens living in Fulton county outside the city of Atlanta worked in the city and could not leave their work to go to the country precincts, which opened at 8 a. m. and closed at 3 p. m.

Deplores Existing Law.

Professor Simmons deplored the antiquated law which provides that polls in country precincts close between the above named hours, and stated that citizens of rural districts should at least have the alternative of voting at the courthouse when it was impossible to return to their home precincts to vote during the limited space of time.

Another feature of the election which worked against the passage of the bond issue, according to Professor Simmons, was the fact that according to the law, every voter who stays away from the polls casts a vote against the issue.

Advocates Change.

A marriage of unusual interest to the people of Atlanta and Georgia was that of Miss Emma Binns and Dr. W. H. Major yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the home of the bride, 254 Myrtle street. The marriage was not announced and came as a surprise to the many friends of the popular people. Only the immediate members of the family attended the marriage. POLICY OF BRITISH LEADER AT GENOA APPROVED BY U. S.

Conditions for Russ Recognition Laid Down by Lloyd George Same as Hughes' Principles.

U. S. IS VITALLY INTERESTED IN PARLEY

These Statements Are Forthcoming Tuesday Following Discussion of Subject at Cabinet Meet.

BY ROBERT J. BENDER.

Washington, May 9.—The course Lloyd George has pursued at Genoa is the course originally advocated by the American government.

The conditions upon which Lloyd George would grant recognition to Russia embrace the "basic four-point principles" set forth by Secretary Hughes in his message to the soviet government last summer.

By unquestionable authorities these two statements were uttered Tuesday, following a meeting of President Harding's cabinet at which discussion of Genoa and Russia, and the relation of the United States to both situations, played a conspicuous part.

U. S. Vitally Involved.

The statements indicate, first, that the future course of this government is inextricably bound up in the outcome of the allied effort to crown their efforts with success at Genoa. It is the fervent hope and wish of the United States that the Genoa conference succeed, it was stated at the white house Tuesday. And it was on the occasion of this expression that it developed Lloyd George's program at Genoa not only met with American approval but was substantially along lines previously laid down by the government.

This fact, coupled with the added information that the Lloyd George conditions for recognizing Russia embraced the four basic principles set forth by the United States—protection of lives and property rights, freedom of labor and establishment of courts of claim—there may be realization of how close Russia may be to actual recognition by the rest of the world, the United States included.

Administration officials recently returned from Russia have reported to this government:

Soviet Doing Best.

1. That the soviet regime is doing its utmost to meet American requirements for recognition; that the Hughes "set of principles" has become as familiar a household word in Russia as Wilson's "fourteen points" became in Germany, and that the soviet government has virtually aban-

METHODISTS HEAR CENTENARY REPORT

Great Enthusiasm Aroused at General Conference When Name of Woodrow Wilson Is Heard.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 9.—(Special.)—Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of Tulsa, Okla., made a most inspiring address at the opening of today's session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, in session here.

The committee on episcopacy began today in making its reports in sections. One memorial, which proposed provision for the trial of a bishop accused during a session of the general conference, went to the calendar.

Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of Malden, Mass., was introduced to the body, and made some brief but happy remarks.

J. N. Holder, of Atlanta, chairman of the committee on rules, made report recommending that documents proposing legislation be announced by caption instead of being read, and that all "concurrent" and "non-concurrent" measures be made separately. These new rules will greatly expedite the affairs of the body.

Applause For Wilson.

Dry Agent Can Make $20,000 Every Month In Detroit, He Says

Detroit, May 9.—Convicted of bribery, Robert L. Crinnian, former prohibition enforcement officer, told details of what he declared was a gigantic organization to bring liquor into the United States from Canada.

Crinnian said that every dry officer in Detroit and in other cities on the Canada border can make at least $20,000 a month by accepting bribes of bootleggers. He said there is a big syndicate with offices in Detroit, Chicago and Waterloo, Ont., employing hundreds of agents in an underground railroad system which is constantly running large liquor cargoes past watching officials.

HARDWICK-SLATON DEBATE ARRANGED UPON INCOME TAX

Present and Former Executives to Take Opposite Sides on Topic of Statewide Interest.

HARDWICK IN FAVOR OF INCOME SYSTEM

Slaton Has Delivered Addresses in Opposition to Move Which Will Face Next Legislature.

For the first time since the proposed new state income tax became an issue of general importance in Georgia, a joint debate between two of the principal leaders on the question will be staged at the Capital City club at the May 17 meeting of the Atlanta Automobile association. Governor Thomas W. Hardwick will appear as chief speaker in behalf of the income tax, and former Governor John M. Slaton will take the floor as the principal speaker against the measure.

The debate was arranged by C. C. Baggs, chairman of the entertainment committee for the evening, and announcement that these two speakers would appear in joint debate on this question has aroused widespread interest.

Hardwick Favors Project.

Since adoption of the state income tax as a substitute either in whole or in part for the ad valorem system of taxation of Georgia was first suggested, Governor Hardwick has been one of its leading supporters. The governor has spoken at several meetings attended by prominent Atlanta citizens in which he indorsed, in general, the principles of the proposed taxing asytem.

The first public opposition to the adoption of the tax was made in a speech delivered at a recent meeting of the Presidents' club by former Governor Slaton. Since that time the former governor has delivered several speeches against the proposed measure and in favor of a retention of the present taxation system principles.

In the public addresses delivered by both Governor Hardwick and former Governor Slaton, many sharp divisions in sentiment have appeared. The present governor has advocated substitution of the income tax prin-

Chicago, May 9.—If his superiors should happen to approach Warden Wesley Westbrook, of the big Cook county jail and suggest that he take a vacation at once, there is little doubt but that Mr. Westbrook would fall to his knees and with tears of joy streaming down his face, kiss their hands with great feeling.

MAYOR DEFENDS CITY GOVERNMENT IN CHARTER TALK

"I've Made Best Mayor City Ever Had," He Tells Kirkwood Voters at Meeting Tuesday Night.

SAYS NUTTING ACTS "LIKE A SAND CRAB"

Three Charter Meetings Keep Interest Aroused Tuesday—Florida Man Urges Commission Rule.

To voters of Kirkwood at the Kirkwood High school Tuesday night, Mayor Key described himself as the best mayor Atlanta ever had.

"I believe the people will tell you," he said, "that I've made the best mayor the city ever had. I've got this city going. Oh, it's going, and most of the things I have done have been through sheer force and determination."

The mayor went out to Kirkwood to speak in behalf of the Choate charter, and spoke to an audience of thirty-six people.

He flayed Councilman J. R. Nutting, standpat leader, and said his antics are like those of a "sand crab."

"You can't efficiently handle the business of Atlanta before a council of thirty-six members," he stated. "Councilman Nutting said the council ought to be reduced. He admitted it in my office the other day and admitted he changed because he thought he could get more votes.

"Nutting's like one of these sand crabs that goes to one side. He never goes the way he looks. When his brain acts his mouth flies open. He's a clever man, but he talks too much."

Two Other Rallies.

Two other charter rallies were held Tuesday—one an open-air Watkins meeting, in front of the Flatiron building, at which J. W. Greer, city manager of Tallahassee, Fla., was the principal speaker, and the other a Watkins rally at Marietta street and Ponders avenue. W. C. Caraway, J. E. Cumbea, Mrs. J. H. Gibbs and Miss Louise Bentley spoke at this meeting.

Representatives of the charter groups addressed the Catholic business women's organization Tuesday afternoon in the rectory of the Sacred Heart church.

Mayor Key charged in his opening remarks that the opposition in the conduct of its fight has played on the people's prejudices and has tried to array section against section.

"A good many things have been said to arouse the prejudice of the smaller communities," he said. "It's a pity we cannot have a race without appealing to the lowest kind of prejudices."

MYSTERY SHROUDS SHOOTING OF GIRL

Police Reject Her Story That Gun Fell From Cabinet—Phone Call Traced—Man Is Sought.

The investigation into the shooting of Miss Beulah Helton, 25 years old, of 50 West Baker street, who is at Grady hospital at the point of death, will be continued today. Officers working on the case have not accepted as final the statement of the injured woman that she was accidentally shot.

Although Miss Helton declares no one entered her room Sunday night after her roommate, Mrs. Gladys Lucile Reeves, left shortly after 9 o'clock, evidence found by the officers seems to dispute this statement.

The physical facts in the case dispute the statement made by Miss Helton to the effect that she was shot when the pistol fell from a medicine cabinet to the floor and exploded. The range of the bullet would have been upward in such a case, but an examination of the wound showed that the bullet entered straight, officers declare.

Mrs. Reeves suggested that the bullet might have struck the bathtub be-

BUCKSHOT WOUNDS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR WALTON DEATH

Totally New Track Taken by Detectives, as It Is Shown That Negro Did Not Fire Fatal Shots.

ADDITIONAL ARRESTS ARE MADE ON TUESDAY

Sleuths Searching for Gun of Unusual Caliber, Bullets From Which Struck Three Men.

Investigation into the fatal shooting of Dan Walton, 18 years old, and the serious wounding of three others in the labor riot at the corner of Bellwood avenue and Ashby streets Sunday afternoon, took an unexpected turn Tuesday afternoon, when H. J. Williams, 29-year-old telegraph operator, and D. P. Allen, 27-year-old clerk, were arrested by City Detectives Cason and McGee after it had been discovered that Walton died from a bullet wound instead of buckshot, as was first believed to be the case by officials.

Examination of the body of Walton, who died Sunday night at Grady hospital, disclosed the presence of a 32.20 bullet in the head instead of buckshot, as was first reported by the physicians who examined him Sunday, to have been the cause of death. The bullet, while battered up considerably, was identified by Chief of Detectives Lamar Poole as being of a 32.20 caliber, which dispels the theory of officers that Charlie Hunt, negro porter, who had an automatic pump gun, fired the fatal shot. There were no signs of any buckshot wound in any region of the body where an injury might prove fatal.

New Turn in Case.

It was at first generally conceded by those investigating the case that the negro had fired the shot which ended young Walton's life and seriously wounded two other white boys. All witnesses concur in the statement that Hunt, who is held in the Tower, used only an automatic shotgun, and that he could not have fired the fatal shot.

After the discovery that Walton had not been killed by buckshot, detectives ordered that an X-ray be made immediately of the wounds received by J. J. Chastain, of 244 1-2 Bellwood avenue, and Kelly Bailey, of 293 Bellwood avenue.

The result of the X-ray examinations on both cases showed no trace of buckshot but revealed beyond a question that the wounds suffered by both Chastain and Bailey were from pistol or rifle bullets, it is stated. The caliber of the bullets was stated by officers to be 32.20 in their opinion. Though they would not be definite in naming the caliber, they were positive, as were the physicians, that neither buckshot nor any smaller shot fired from a shotgun had anything to do with the death of Walton or the serious injury of his two companions.

When questioned as to whether or not the negro might have cut open a shotgun shell and inserted bullets in place of the shot, the officers declared that such a thing could not have been done with any success as the force of the bullet fired in such a manner would not have been sufficient to have penetrated as far as the bullet did in the case of Walton.

Williams and Allen were taken to the police station when arrested but were removed to the Fulton county tower Tuesday night after deputy sheriffs served warrants charging murder from the municipal court which were sworn out by W. H. Chastain, brother of J. J. Chastain, who is believed to have been fatally wounded.

The officers are of the opinion that the men who fired the fatal shots were concealed in some building near the scene of the fight and that the shots were fired from rifles at some distance.

Chastain Dying.

The condition of Chastain underwent a change for the worse Tuesday afternoon and physicians in attendance entertained very little hope for his recovery. His condition became better Monday night, but early Tuesday afternoon he seemed to grow weaker. His mother was at his bedside during the afternoon and night.

That bullets of the same caliber found in the bodies of the three white boys have been located in the homes of two of four white men under arrest charged with murder in connection with the shooting, was the statement made by W. H. Chastain, brother of J. J. Chastain. He reported discovery of the bullets to Detectives Cason and McGee, which, with other information secured by the officers, resulted in the two additional arrests.

The combined forces of city detectives, deputy sheriffs, Special Investigator Plemmie Minor, of Solicitor Boykin's office, and members of the police force will continue the investigation Wednesday, which is expected to result in other disclosures which will cause the arrest of at least one more white man.

The arrest of Williams and Allen brings the total of arrests in connection with the shooting up to five.

Yardmaster R. B. Puckett, of the A., B. & A.; G. W. Wylie, clerk, and Charlie Hunt, negro, having been arrested previous to Tuesday.

Many Witnesses Called.

More than 75 witnesses have been summoned before the grand jury for Friday, when a thorough investigation will be made into the shooting. Chief of Detectives Poole and City Detectives Cason and McGee worked late Tuesday locating witnesses and subpoenaing them to appear before the grand jury.

Chief Poole commended Detectives Cason and McGee for their work on the case. The new developments came after it had been disclosed, much to the surprise of officers investigating the case, that neither of the three men, one of whom died, had been wounded by buckshots, but had been wounded by bullets either fired from a pistol or a rifle.

Detectives are of the opinion that the bullets were fired from a rifle, for 32.20 caliber pistols are seldom seen and not manufactured at the present time.

Location of at least one rifle used in the shooting is expected during Wednesday, it was learned Tuesday night.

ONLY THREE CLEARED IN 119 LIQUOR CASES

The commission on civics of the Christian Council of Atlanta reported to that body Tuesday that out of 119 cases in the city court of Atlanta for violating the prohibition laws during the month of April, six were given chaingang sentences, 85 were fined, 25 forfeited their bonds and three were found not guilty. The average amount of the fines imposed, as reported by the committee of which John A Manget is chairman, was $44.43.

The report and comments by the chairman follows:

"Total number of cases	119
"Not guilty	8
Bonds forfeited	25
Total number fined	85
Sentenced to chaingang	6
Total	119
Amount of fines:
"Cases fined $15	4
Cases fined $100	8
Cases fined $75	1

"Average amount of fine imposed	$44.43

"At the last session of the Muscogee county grand jury presentments were drawn showing that it was the sense of that body that the courts placing fines on bootleggers was against the best interests of the community, and recommended that the judge impose chaingang sentences.

"At this same session of the court in Columbus fifty-two violators of the prohibition law out of a total of 103 cases were sent to the chaingang.

"In Fulton county the records show only six out of 119 cases were sentenced to the chaingang.

Mr. Candler talked on the city manager situation in Decatur, assuring his hearers that the people of that city were heartily in favor of city manager government and that it was because of personal prejudice alone that Decatur's first manager was recalled.

NO PAPER LOST IN DUPRE'S CASE

Investigation Tuesday disclosed that there is no paper lost in the Frank B. DuPre case so far as anyone at the solicitor general's office knows. E. A. Stephens, assistant solicitor of that office, had occasion to be in Macon Monday relative to personal and official matters and while there called on Judge Mathews, who heard the DuPre case. The conversation, however, was of an informal and friendly nature and was not in an effort to locate any paper, it was stated by Mr. Stephens.

It was learned that the defendant's counsel insists that the judge should have passed an order directing that the state's counter-showing be made a part of the record in the case, and that the same be filed. The state denies that such was necessary because of the fact that no objection to the state's counter-showing for lack of a former court order was raised before the trial judge, and for the further reason that the court indicated in his order overruling the motion for a new trial that he considered the counter-showing as a part of the record in the case, and defendant's counsel specified this counter-showing as a part of the record in the case, and asked that it be sent up to the supreme court along with the balance of the record for consideration by that court.

It was also learned at the solicitor general's office that this technical question, together with some objections to the court's instructions to the jury on legal questions constitute the matters which the supreme court will review in this case.

ciples for some of the principles of the presented ad valorem system, while the former governor has directly opposed, in his speeches, such substitution.

Of Statewide Import.

The subject is one of statewide importance and one which, it is expected, will become a statewide issue with the convening of the legislature. The debate will bring together on the same platform two of the ablest speakers in Georgia, both of whom are skilled in joint discussions.

It is also announced that Chairman Baggs, of the entertainment committee, has arranged several other interesting features for the program, and it is expected that a new attendance record will be made at the May meeting of the automobile association.

JAIL WARDEN PUT IN PREDICAMENT

ing the jail into a nursery. Six women, four of them with babies, and the other two expectant mothers, have been placed in his jail by a queer turn of fate.

Westbrook would like to have them go away from there. But all of them are serving sentences for contempt of court and in this case not even pardons from the governor, which have been granted, can free them.

Seek Freedom Excuse.

Attorneys, and even judges, are frantically scanning the statutes of Illinois to see if there is not some ancient law that will free the women and their babes in arms.

In the meantime, Westbrook is furnishing special milk, special gruel, and special triangular garments for the babies. He is allowing husbands baby carriages to back up at the side entrance of his establishment and take the babies for the air each day.

And, if a legal method of freeing the women is not found shortly, he will have to go into important conference with jail matrons on what to do when the first visit the stork ever made to the Cook county jail transpires.

As Time Rolled On.

This dilemma is the unusual outcome of jail sentences to six defiant young Amazons during a cigar-maker's strike here three years ago. The women disregarded an injunction restraining them from picketing and each was sentenced to jail. Their cases were appealed.

The decision of the appellate court found the six women no longer interested in rolling cigars or forming picket lines. All had married and four had infant children. All will be mothers before their sentences expire unless something hapens that will release them.

Appealed to on humanitarian grounds, the courts held it was impossible to annul contempt sentences.

Pardon Not Honored.

Governor Small interceded and pardoned them, but the pardons were not honored by Sheriff Charles W. Peterson on the grounds that the governor had no pardoning power in a civil action of this character.

So Tuesday found Mrs. Dora Siegliss rocking 17-months-old Philip back and forth and crooning a lullaby. Mrs. Sophie Bletcher was sewing on something or other. Mrs. Katy Geier Hadl was angry because the warden had limited six month's old Philip to a thirty-minute airing. Mrs. Eva Glutting was giving a matron a "piece of her mind" for not having seven-weeks-old Steve's milk the right temperature and Steve was crying lustily. Mrs. Annie Buchart shook an angry fist at everybody in sight because baby Annie had got the colic on jail milk, and the matrons were greatly concerned about Mrs. Josephine Fencel.

In the office of the warden the cries of the babies could be heard faintly and Westbrook sat there, a baffled look in his eyes, and puffed a cigar much more rapidly than respect for good tobacco warrants.

SENATOR WATSON RAPS PRESS STORY

Georgian Criticizes Reference to Unfinished Speech Carried by Press Association Saturday.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.
Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, May 9.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, who started to make a speech during the tariff debate in the senate Saturday, but refused to continue because of annoying circumstances, today issued a statement severely criticizing a reference made to his remarks by one of the press associations. The story in question sent out by the press association carried the following paragraph:

"Senator Waston, of Georgia, said the republicans themselves were responsible for long delay on the tariff, citing the months taken in committee consideration. Incidentally the Georgia senator discussed alleged reckless automobile drivers and traffic rules in Washington, the flow of the water of the Nile, Amazon and Mississippi rivers and other subjects."

The facts are Senator Watson began to explain the origin of the tariff by various illustrations, but yielded the floor before he had had time to enter into the subject matter in hand. It was this fact that made his remarks appear foreign to the subject being bated. Senator Watson's dictated statement follows:

Charges Unfairness.

"The story which a press association sent to papers concerning a speech which I started to make last week does me an injustice.

"For some reason this organization has been most unfair to me ever since I came to Washington, and it misrepresented, from day to day, the testimony which I brought out before the committee which was investigating the charges of brutality leveled at certain army officers who had mistreated their men during the world war.

"The evidence taken by this committee substantiated every charge that I had made on the floor of the senate, and those who know me will readily believe that I would not ever have made the charges in the senate, or elsewhere, if I had not been certain that they could be proved.

Only Began Speech.

"The dispatch, of last week, represents me as having made a speech on 'the Mississippi river, the Amason, the Rhine,' and several other things.

"The truth of the matter is, I had begun a speech on the tariff which would have lasted nearly two hours, and I began by saying that the origin of nearly all systems were interesting, just as the origin of the great rivers are matters of interest to travelers, who seek to find the source of the Nile, the Danube, the Euphrates and the Mississippi.

"I meant to have proceeded and spoken of the interest which is taken in tracing to their sources, the great principles of jurisprudence, such as trial by jury, private ownership of property, the immunity of the accused from having to testify against himself, and his right to a speedy and public trial, at which he shall be assisted by counsel of his own choice, and by the process of the court to bring those witnesses whom he deems to be necessary to his defense.

Origin of Tariff.

"After having laid the foundation for my speech in this way, I meant to trace the origin of the tariff system, which as all men know, is of comparatively recent origin.

"None of the great empires of antiquity had a tariff system, the middle ages had none; and there never was one on earth, until the minister of the French king, Louis XIV, resorted to import tax, as a means of raising additional revenue, made necessary by the wild extravagances of his master.

"This French minister was Colbert, and he is the father of every tariff system now existent.

Cites Interruption.

"A few moments after I began my speech, two republican members from the house of representatives came into the senate chamber, and started up a loud conversation, near me at my right. I stopped, and remonstrated, and the presiding officer, Senator Cummings, rapped for order, whereupon the two republicans left the chamber.

"I resumed my speech, and in a few minutes, a senator who had been absent from the chamber, came in and took a seat immediately in front of me, between me and the presiding officer, and began a conversation with a senator.

"This interruption distracted my attention, and annoyed me, because I never write out my speeches, but make them offhand, and, therefore, any constant talking immediately behind me, or beside me, or in front of me, is disconcerting.

"After having paused for a moment, hoping that the senator would see that he was interrupting me, I merely remarked to the presiding officer, 'Mr. President, I yield the floor.'

"Everybody on the floor, and in the galleries, saw that I had just begun with my speech, and I think the manner in which I was annoyed was universally criticised.

"Those who were responsible tendered me prompt and earnest apologies, which I accepted most readily, but inasmuch as that part of my speech which I had made did not make sense, because of my inability to complete it, I told the reporter to leave it out altogether, and it does not appear in the Congressional Record.

"I expect to take the floor again in a day or two, and deliver the speech."

PROBE OF CONVICT MUTINY IS BEGUN

Columbia, S. C., May 9.—Investigation was begun today by prison officials of the mutiny of prisoners at the state penitentiary here yesterday which resulted in the wounding of fourteen men and a guard. Two of the prisoners are in the city hospital and their condition is reported as serious.

Apparently the prisoners had planned a general delivery, officials stated this morning, adding that severe punishment would be meted out to the men responsible for the disorder.

PRINCESS' DIAMOND BRINGS ONLY $5,500

New York, May 9.—The diamond which Princess Fatima, Afghan sultana, valued at $100,000 when she brought it to this country last summer, was sold at a sheriff's execution sale today for $5,500 to John R. Keim, a commission buyer. The diamond had been attached by the government because duty was not paid on it.

To Raise Fund To Send Veterans To Richmond Meet

Atlanta will be asked Saturday to help send a delegation of Atlanta Confederate veterans to the approaching encampment in Richmond. In keeping with a custom originated about five years ago, the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will make a public appeal for funds with which to assist those veterans who are unable to meet the expenses of the trip.

Lapel buttons bearing a photograph of Jefferson Davis, Confederate president, and the slogan, "On to Richmond With the Veterans" will be sold on the downtown streets and in the public buildings. No price for the buttons has been set, and they will be given in exchange for free-will contributions.

Mrs. A. C. Woodward is chairman of the veterans' aid committee. She has appointed a large committee of members of the U. D. C. and the Children of the Confederacy to distribute the buttons.

POLICY OF BRITISH APPROVED BY U. S.

doned all of its most objectionable practices.

2. That there are no signs of a revolution or even evolution in Russia now and won't be until Russia's economic structure is once more placed upon a sound foundation.

3. That when this time comes the evolution will conform to some phase of the soviet idea, because the peasants, who constitute 80 per cent of Russia's population, having seized the land of the old czarist proprietors will never give it up.

4.—That there is absolutely no chance of a return to imperal rule.

Will Accept Soon.

Discussion of these conditions by the cabinet has led to the expression by authorities that America would be doing business with Russia on a big scale before the end of the year. Not that Russia has, or for some time will have, any money to pay for the goods; but she will have accepted the fundamentals laid down, which will permit of trade being "good risk" rather than a "virtually assured loss" as now.

But, while the attitude of the United States for the moment is governed largely by what may transpire at Genoa, if the Genoa conference breaks up, without having achieved success, the United States, still basing its acton on its original four principles of recognition will "go it alone." If the allies accord Russia recognition along the lines laid down at Genoa there is reason to believe now that the United States will follow suit.

on temperance and social reform recommending that the secretary of the body send greetings to Woodrod Wilson, "the apostle of modern democracy and world peace," was greeted with a burst of prolonged applause, the enthusiasm reaching such a tidal wave that delegates and visitors rose as one man and gave the chautauqua salute. The resolution recommended also that congratulations be wired to President Warren G. Harding and Charles E. Hughes on the good work done at the Washington disarmament conference. This recommendation was greeted with hearty applause.

The Cuba conference was established from the Cuban mission conference, the new conference to embrace all the territory included in the republic of Cuba. The new Cuba conference, with the Arizona conference, ordered formed on yesterday, will make two most promising conferences.

Two Georgians.

Two of Georgia's most worthy sons, Rev. E. E. Clements, formerly of Waycross, and Rev. O. K. Hopkins, formerly of Millen, are the clerical delegates from the Cuba conference.

Proposed legislation continues to come in at a rapid rate; some of which may not be of sufficient importance to go to the calendar, or if placed there, will remain in the rush of the closing days of the session. The last three sessions of the general conference have been of eighteen days' duration, including Sundays. Under this schedule the body will adjourn, possibly May 20.

Church Extension Reports.

Reports, the majority and minority, from the committee on church extension came to the body. The issue of allowing the general board to assess for its work, and each annual conference to make assessment for individual purposes, was the main question raised, instead of the general board fixing both assessments as at present. Dr. Bascom Anthony, of Savannah, in a characteristic speech, moved that both reports be recommitted to the committee with instructions to recommend that the general and conference boards levy their individual assessments.

Hard-fought Issue.

The issue of the morning was one of the most hard fought of this session, but Dr. Anthony won with an overwhelming majority, when the previous question was moved by Dr. W. F. Quillian, of Macon.

It is thoroughly apparent now that the general boards are to have their powers circumscribed.

Centenary Reports.

Dr. W. B. Beauchamp, of Nashville, made the report of the centenary commission, followed by addresses on the results of the centenary in the various fields: Bishop John M. Moore, of Nashville, "The Centenary in Brazil;" Bishop James Connor, Jr., of Birmingham, "The Centenary in Mexico;" Bishop W. F. McMurray, of Louisville, "The Centenary in the Orient;" Bishop N. V. W. Darlington, of Huntington, W. Va., "The Centenary in Belgium, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia," and Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, "The Centenary in the Homeland."

This was the most thrilling hour of the general conference to date.

The Arkansas state Sunday school convention is in session here at the Central Methodist church, and Drs. E. B. Chappell, of Nashville, and George R. Stuart, of Birmingham, were on the program this afternoon for addresses.

APPROPRIATION BILL DEADLOCK IS BROKEN

Washington, May 9.—The deadlock between the senate and house on the independent offices appropriation bill was broken late today when senate conferees agreed to accept the house limitation on salaries for shipping board officials. The agreement would permit employment of six officers or attorneys at not to exceed $25,000 and two at $20,000, while the maximum rate to be paid other officers would be $11,000 a year.

GARRETT BROTHERS ARE FOUND GUILTY

Columbus, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) The three Garrett brothers, of Taylor county, their father, W. H. Garrett, and C. M. Wadsworth, were convicted early tonight in the United States district court on charges of conspiracy to interfere with federal officers in the discharge of their duty. Sentence will be imposed by Judge Samuel H. Sibley tomorrow.

Wednesday, the five men with Dullen Dandy and Walter Lockhart, negroes, will be placed on trial in federal court charged with violating the national prohibition law.

Alfred Garret, Enoch Garrett and Napoleon Garrett are charged with murder in the state court in Taylor county as the result of the fatal shooting of Officer R. W. Jackson, when a still was raided near Reynolds, December 16, 1920.

John Garrett, a brother of the three surviving brothers, was killed during the gun fight between the Taylor county men and the officers.

In the prohibition cases which will be tried tomorrow, the two negroes and C. M. Wadsworth, it is alleged, were found at the still by the officers.

MYSTERY SHROUDS SHOOTING OF GIRL

fore striking Miss Melton, but the officers scouted this idea.

Investigation of a phone call supposed to have been received by Miss Helton shortly after 9 o'clock, in which she made an engagement for the evening, will be made by the officers.

The pay station at police headquarters, which is used by people other than officers, rang early last night and a woman who, seemingly, was atempting to disguise her voice, said that a man left the apartments of Miss Helton around 10:30 o'clock. This unidentified woman stated that if a phone call was traced the police would be able to locate the man who either shot Miss Helton or could tell something about the shooting. She said the phone rang shortly after 9 o'clock.

The detectives will continue the investigation today. The letter found on the floor in the room addressed to "G. L. R.," remains a mystery. Mrs. Gladys Lucile Reeves, to whom the letter was supposed to have been addressed, said she does not understand it. The tone of the note indicates that the writer had trouble with the person to whom it was addressed.

"We never had a fuss and were like sisters," Mrs. Reeves declared.

Mrs. Reeves will probably be questioned further during Wednesday. She remained at the hospital with Miss Helton for several hours Tuesday afternoon.

Physicians state that Miss Helton had been shot about three hours before she was brought to the hospital, which accounts, they say, for her weakened condition. The time of the shooting has been fixed at 10 o'clock by the officers.

Text of Letter.

The following is the text of the letter, addressed to "G. L. R." supposed to be Mrs. Gladys Lucille Reeves, and turned over to the police:

May 8, 1922.

To One I Love—G. L. R.: Well, Sugar, as I cannot stand it any longer I will bring it to a close. But, oh, darling, how I do love you. Sugar, if you had a cause to do me this way, it would be alright. But you had no cause. You know I have loved you, dear—dearer than my own life, maybe, and you know I have.

So, darling, you see that you have made a mistake, but Sugar don't ever do anyone else as you have me. Will you not do just one thing for my sake—will you? And don't ever tell another one you love her, and do her as you have me, for I have told you so many times that you were my life, and just think what you would say.

I was the one who had to stand for it all. Just think of this, Sugar, and you could not call me this morning, could you? Dearie, the last thing I asked you was to call me, but darling I don't blame you, 'cause you did not love me enough to call me when you know I loved you so.

"Dear darling, always think of this and remember you were the cause of my doing all of this, just because you got mad with me and could not take my word any more. But darling, always tell the truth, from now on. Will you, Sugar?

You must be a better girl, and be true to all, don't do anyone as you have me—please don't. I hope, with all my heart, that you will be happy now, as there will be none to tell you how they love you—and they cannot love you as I did.

I gave my life just because I loved you, and could not live without you.

I have told you that a lot of times, haven't I? I am so blue, I will not write much more. My poor heart aches so bad—and brain, too. You don't know, and I hope you will never have this to go through, but I have taken it all on myself, haven't I, darling?

I do love you so much, I just cannot live and be away from you, so remember the poor heart you broke.

Well, Sugar, be a good girl, and always think of one who loved you better than life. So, bye-bye; may God bless you forever and ever!

Love with all my life, To Mrs. Lucille Reeves, from Beulah H.

P. S.—You can get me my sister at 127 South Boulevard, and let her know. Bye-bye, to all sisters and brothers.

"Hurrah for the Southern Business College," Writes Miss Agnes Barber, in Fine Position

MISS AGNES BARBER

Secures Splendid Position After a Course in the S. S. & B. University.

Everybody wants a business education who has not already gone into business, and it seems that the Southern Business college, 11 Whitehall street, is busier than ever before answering telephone calls, writing to out-of-town inquirers and talking to others who are calling in person about the summer courses.

Several of the students accepted positions Monday and a number of new pupils enrolled.

Miss Agnes Barber, a bright young lady who recently finished the Southern's shorthand course, is so delighted with her work and so greatly thankful for her training that she writes the following letter to the managers of the Southern Business college, and it is indeed interesting:

Atlanta, Ga., May 8, 1922.

Southern Shorthand & Business University, Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen—I am proud of the fact that I took a course in the Southern Shorthand and Business university. I have a good position with Fox & Company, proprietors of The Boys' Shop, this city, as a result of my course at the Southern.

The knowledge of shorthand is certainly an indispensable aid to any one who desires to secure a commercial position. The Southern is, without a doubt, the place at which to receive such knowledge, for its systems are the very best, and its large number of teachers are experts in their line.

Hurrah for the Southern! This is an exultation which comes from the hearts of its graduates.

Yours very respectfully,
MISS AGNES BARBER.

LOCAL ENGINEERS SPEAK THURSDAY

Atlantans to Take Prominent Part in Program of American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Two prominent Atlanta men will occupy important posts on the programs of the national spring session of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers when President George H. Harris, of the Exposition Cotton mills, will deliver an address on "Management Applied to Textile Plants," and Frank H. Neely, Atlanta industrial engineer, will discuss "The Southern Worker, His History and Character." Both will speak at the Piedmont hotel Thursday morning under the auspices of the management section.

After enjoying sight-seeing trips to many points of interest around Atlanta Tuesday afternoon and after appearing as guests at a dinner-dance Tuesday night given in their honor on the Ansley hotel roof, members of the society prepared for a busy day's work Wednesday. With more than 400 prominent engineers and business men now here for the session, the program for Wednesday promised to be the most interesting of any day of the national spring meeting.

In the power division of the society another Atlanta man will take a prominent part on the program Thursday, when Charles G. Adsit, consulting engineer of the Georgia Railway and Power company, will discuss "Power Development in the Southeast." Other speakers in the power division will be C. A. Mees, Charlotte, N. C.; H. B. Reynolds and W. F. Hovey, of New York, and John A. Sirnit, of Birmingham, Ala.

General Session.

In the general session Wednesday, Major J. K. Clement, of the gas, power and ordnance division, will discuss "The Muscle Shoals Plant and the Nitrogen Supply." The textile division and the fuel division will occupy leading places on the business programs for Wednesday, the textile men meeting at the chamber of commerce and the fuel men meeting on the Cecil hotel roof.

Leading textile engineers of the country, many of them being connected with large textile plants in the south, will take part in the textile meeting. L. B. Jenckes will discuss weaving machinery; Joseph P. Davidson, of Atlanta, chief engineer and superintendent of the American Machine Manufacturing company, and F. E. Banfield, Jr., of Newton, Mass., will also speak. H. M. Latham, of Worcester, Mass., will preside at the textile session.

The fuel division, with F. R. Low, of New York, editor of "Power," presiding, will hear addresses delivered and papers read by F. G. Cutler, Birmingham, Ala., chief mechanical engineer of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway company; E. A. Uehling, combustion engineer of Milwaukee, Wis., and C. W. E. Clarke, of New York, mechanical engineer of the Dwight F. Robinson company.

Clement's Address.

The address of Major Clement on the Muscle Shoals development will be the principal feature at the general session to be held Wednesday at the Piedmont hotel in the convention room. Other speakers at this session will be R. H. Heilman, consulting engineer of Pittsburg, and W. K. Lewis, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

One of the most interesting speeches of the session was made at the Tuesday meeting by Johann Stumpf, of Charlottenburg, Germany, on the use of exhaust in reciprocating engines. Dr. Stumpf is inventor of Stumpf uniflow engine and came to America particularly to read this paper before the American society. He was one of the special guests of the Atlanta Rotary club at its meeting Tuesday.

Another feature of the general session Tuesday was adoption of a resolution asking the government to establish standard radio wave length for use of engineering societies. The resolution was introduced by Prof. S. N. Ely, of Carnegie Tech, and after its adoption, was telegraphed to the department of commerce.

Trip to Shoals.

Business men of Atlanta will be invited to accompany members of the society to Birmingham Thursday night when a visit will be paid to the industrial plants of that city and later to Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee river. The council Tuesday approved applications for charters filed by the cities of Chattanooga, Dallas, Memphis, Louisville, Lincoln and Omaha.

Among speakers before the textile division Tuesday were S. E. Gillespie, Dallas, Texas, and E. H. Marble, Worcester, Mass. In addition to the address of Dr. Stumpf at the general session, speeches were made by C. C. Trump, Syracuse, N. Y., and Alfred Cotton, St. Louis, Mo.

The social affair at the Ansley roof was largely attended. The roof garden was elaborately decorated, and a dinner-dance was enjoyed. On the sightseeing trip around the city some of the visitors were taken to the plant of the Atlantic Steel company, and were piloted over that plant by a committee headed by H. H. Leach. Another group of the visitors were taken to Stone mountain by a committee headed by T. S. Jackson. A third group was taken for a trip to the cyclorama in Grant park and to the home of Joel Chandler Harris, in West End, by a committee headed by Logan Bleckley, Jr., and O. H. Schultz, Jr.

Howard Butt, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., is at the Piedmont hotel to attend the spring meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Mr. Butt was connected with the Atlanta office of the Babcock & Wilcox company, and is now manager of the metalurgical and chemical department of the Under Feed Stoker Company of America, and lives in Cleveland, Ohio.

MONDAY WARMEST DAY

Tuesday Misses 1922 Mark by One Degree.

By a margin of one degree, Tuesday dropped below Monday in its maximum temperature, and the opening day of the present week remains the warmest of the year thus far, according to figures obtained at the office of C. F. Van Herrmann, local weather forecaster. Monday's high mark was 85 degrees.

The weather will remain generally fair throughout Wednesday, with little changes in temperature, according to the prediction. Generally fair weather prevails in states east of the Mississippi river. In the far northwest the atmospheric pressure is quite low accompanied by more or less cloudy weather, according to reports from that section.

NAME PRISON HEAD AT MEETING TODAY

A meeting of the Georgia prison commission is scheduled for Wednesday morning at which appointment of a successor to the late J. Pope Brown, as superintendent of the state prison farm at Milledgeville will be determined, it was stated Tuesday.

While members of the commission have not confirmed it, a rumor to the effect that B. H. Dunaway, prominent farmer of Lincoln county and former ordinary of that county, will be selected as the new superintendent, was prevalent at the capitol Monday and Tuesday. More than fifty applications for the position has been filed with the commission, it was stated.

FAILURE TO VOTE KILLS BOND ISSUE

the polls and participate in the election, his vote should not count," said Mr. Simmons. "Under the present law every registered voter who stays away from the polls votes against the bonds. I advocate a change in the present law governing bond elections."

High tribute was paid by Mr. Simmons to women of the county who worked untiringly for passage of the bonds. He also stated that members of the Parent-Teacher association had given much time and labor in an effort to have the issue passed. He stated that it was impossible to predict what would happen to the Fulton county high school, maintenance of which was absolutely dependent upon the success of the bond election.

INTEREST GROWS IN HOME SHOW

A bill is now pending in the legislature to remedy these evils, which bill carries with it a standardized budget system. The present law does not permit the county to borrow money, and while it is sometimes done, it is at the peril of the county official."

Enthusiasm Increases.

With the coming of continued crowds of vistors to the show all during Tuesday, the enthusiasm of the officials of the Atlanta real estate board and the individual exhibitors continued to mount. Like the Christmas shopper, the "own your home" sightseer seems to have adopted the slogan, "Do your sightseeing early," they declare.

"While we expected considerable numbers of people to visit the show, we never dared hope for the large attendance which has been registered to date," stated R. W. Evans, chairman of the "own your home" committee of the Atlanta real estate board, who is in active charge of the exhibition. "Some of our more optimistic members thought that possibly we might go to 75,000 for the week, but the rest of us laughed them down. It now appears that they were not only right in their prophecy, but that the mark set will be exceeded.

"This great outpouring of people means just one thing, to my way of thinking. It means that the people of this city are vitally interested in building their own homes just as soon as possible, and they are glad to have the opportunity of securing full and complete information as to available lots, materials and cost such as have been assembled in our show.

"I am anxious that every person in Atlanta realize that admission is absolutely free, and there is no expense whatsoever in connection with a visit to the show. On the other hand, there are many valuable souvenirs and prizes for those who attend."

Lavish Exhibition.

Several of the displays have been amplified since the opening. As the show now stands, it is composed of a bewildering and beautiful exhibition of practically every item which enters into the owning of a home, together with decorating and furnishing displays.

The exquisite little children's play house which is the chief feature of the Patillo Lumber company's booth continues to draw the longing gaze of the children who attend, as well as the admiration of the adults. This little house is complete in every detail, even to the roses which grow over the trellis before the door and beside the windows. It is built in exactly the same manner as a large house, with doors, window fittings, window glass and every other feature. The ceilings of the two rooms are over six feet high, which enables even grown people to move about inside. Since the house is to be given away at the close of the show, the crush about the display is continuous.

It was announced Tuesday that the Phoenix Planing Mills had offered a complete set of window sashes with glass complete for the home that is to be built on the Adair lot. The Phoenix booth has a number of interesting features of the products of this well-known Atlanta mill, and is in direct charge of C. H. Didley, the general manager of the company.

Another announcement Tuesday of interest to the colored people of the city is to the effect that Friday morning colored people will be admitted between the hours of 10 and 1.

A unique feature of the home exposition, which is attracting wide attention is the minuiature model of the new Haas-Howell building which is to be erected at North Forsyth and Poplar streets. The tiny model, which is complete in every respect, was made by Fred Burns, a pupil of the art school of Lewis Gregg. The well-known local architectural firm of Hentz, Reid & Adley drew the plans for the eight-story Haas-Howell structure.

PROTECT THE FORESTS.

In arranging for a forestry convention to be held at Macon during the first week of next June, the Georgia Forestry committee has taken a constructive step in behalf of the community welfare.

It is time for the people of Georgia to awaken to the value of their forest lands and to give them the measure of protection that is necessary in order for nature to reforest them.

That, in a few words, suggests the object and purpose of the proposed convention.

We are told that the alternative of forest protection is the burden of carrying, as a dead weight to the state, 20,000,000 or more acres of virtually unproductive land.

Michigan affords a striking object lesson illustrating the consequences of forest neglect.

There was a time when Michigan, for a period of twenty-five years, led all states in the production of lumber, and Michigan white pine was famous in the lumber markets of the whole world. Its forests brought millions of dollars into the state every year.

They supplied employment for hundreds of thousands of wage earners; they furnished tonnage which enabled railroads to extend their lines into outlying districts and to develop them; they created new towns which, by furnishing local markets and out-of-season employment, aided the pioneer farmers in developing raw un-timbered agricultural lands.

Today that is all changed, for Michigan's forests are practically gone.

Its lumber cut is less than one-half as great as that of Massachusetts; and all for the reason that instead of protecting its forest lands after the virgin timber was cut the state abandoned them to uncontrolled fires and every form of human neglect.

During recent years worthless cut-over lands by the thousands of acres have been reverting to the state of Michigan in lieu of the tax moneys assessed against them.

Already more than two million acres of unproductive land have thus gone into bankruptcy in Michigan; whole towns have been abandoned and several short-line railroads have been dismantled and scrapped.

The last decennial census shows that not only is the rural population of Michigan declining, but that during the last ten years preceding 1920 almost 14,000 Michigan farms have been deserted; and it has been estimated that the people of Michigan are now sending out of the state over $30,000,000 annually for lumber produced in the south and west, while millions of acres of formerly good growing forest lands, sapped of their fertility by repeated fires, lie as an unsightly waste at their very doors!

The people of Georgia will have proven themselves short-sighted indeed, if they ignore their forest lands in this manner; and yet that is precisely what we are now doing!

Within the last decade the lumber production of Georgia has decreased almost 50 per cent, and nothing has been done to encourage regrowth on our cut-over lands.

Every year fire sweeps over hundreds of thousands of acres in Georgia, destroying valuable young growth, robbing the soil of its fertility and increasing the flood hazard of the cities and rural communities along our water courses.

Authorities declare that the forest productiveness of the southern lands is unequaled in any other section of the United States; and it requires no unusually keen observation to note the rapidity with which nature reforests our cut-over lands when not impeded by fire.

Over a quarter of the cut of southern pine today, according to timber authorities, is from second-growth forests which have escaped the flames.

Surely, we require no better evidence of the need of the practical possibilities of making our forest industries permanent and an asset of ever-increasing value to the state!

Foresters assert that fire protection will, to a very large extent, solve the forest problem here in the south; and if that is the case then it is high time for Georgia to provide such protection.

By our procrastination we are not only hazarding an important industry, but we are blindly ignoring nature's ability and willingness to reclothe millions of acres, valuable chiefly for their timber production capabilities, with forests that would be a perpetual source of revenue through the years to come.

The efforts of the Georgia Forestry committee to secure a forestry policy for the state and to put such a policy into actual operation as early as possible, deserve the whole-souled and active support of all citizens who have Georgia's welfare at heart.

CARE FOR THE INSANE.

At the southeast welfare conference held in Waycross last week, John T. Brantley, chairman of the board of trustees of the state sanitarium, strongly advocated the establishment of a state department of mental hygiene as an integral branch of the government of Georgia.

He took the altogether logical position that it is the duty of the state to "correct mental ailments of the people of Georgia with equally as much emphasis as is now devoted to physical ills."

Also, he said—

"A way should be provided for admission to the state sanitarium of persons who voluntarily apply for treatment in the consciousness of approaching mental trouble. Separate institutions should be had so there need be no association of the innocent insane with the criminal.

"County provision should be made for imbeciles and helpless paralytics who are paupers and without friends or relatives to care for them. This class is hopeless. The sanitarium can do them no good. They are harmless to themselves and to society and can be cared for just as well by county authorities under the direction of a public health officer."

Mr. Brantley has called attention to a field of service that unquestionably has been grossly neglected by this state.

Persons who are mentally sick should be treated with as much and as sympathetic care by the state as those who are physically ill; and the state should, as Mr. Brantley suggests, provide equally as adequate facilities for the application of scientific measures for the prevention of insanity as those it has provided for the prevention of physical disease.

As it is now, we have no state institution in Georgia where mental ailments may be treated and corrected until after insanity has actually developed and the victim been "tried," "found guilty" and "sentenced" to the sanitarium at Milledgeville.

It is to be hoped that humanitarians and the general public of Georgia will give due consideration to the constructive suggestions made by the chairman of our state sanitarium board, with a view to putting them into effect.

HOME-MADE PRODUCTS.

The Made-in-Georgia goods of farm and factory are doing a wonderful work in the building up of a greater home prosperity.

Speaking for its own section, the Commerce (Ga.) Observer says—

"Home-made articles of use are in evidence these days. Baskets, brooms, flower-boxes, ax handles and various things of this character are offered for sale by farmers, and in the food line, chickens, eggs, corn meal, potatoes, canned goods, flour, hams, mutton and beef can be had. Things are getting back to a basis which ultimately means prosperity."

The common, ordinary things enumerated above, such as baskets, brooms and simple farm utensils, might pass without notice but for the fact that, being made at home, they find a market there, and keep money at home.

And their local manufacture, even on a small scale at first, means a gradual branching out on the line of greater achievement in other departments of industrial advancement.

More attention is being given now to the marketing of Georgia cane syrup, and wherever it has been marketed in the right containers it has proved a highly profitable product to the farmers. Georgia farmers who have experimented with it have testified that it has tided them over seasons of hard times due to the failure of the cotton crop from the boll weevil.

So many things can be raised and manufactured on the home soil, and at our very doors, there is no reason to seek them abroad.

The right marketing is more than half the battle.

The garden roses have been "rained out," but the garden goods that ring the bell for dinner are coming on swimmingly.

And the stars in its heaven still shine through its tears.

Weary of paths where Life's blooms are denied,
Come in, my Sorrow, and sit by my side!
Chasten me—teach me the lowlier way,

Teach me how hearts still may bleed and be strong—
How Night may be light, and its shadows a song!

Weary of deep seas whose billows divide

And in lilies of light shall Life's grief be forgiven:
Only through Sorrow Life finds its true heaven!

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

(Copyright, 1921, for The Constitution)

There is a saying that cleanliness is next to godliness—but why isn't cleanliness godliness itself?

The beatiful yard where your home nestles, the clear water at the bottom of the spring, the neatly dressed man or woman, the orderly desk where you work, clean hands and face, and a cleared-out mind, free from thoughts that degrade and pull down—are not these evidences of beauty and sure suggestions of happiness?

Most domestic and wild animals are naturally clean in their habits. Nature has a way of disintegrating and absorbing that which dies or becomes soiled.

So that a large part of our lives are taken up in washing this soiled world of ours and making it a fitter place for us to breathe in and to carry on our work.

I am wondering if every clean thought—though unexpressed—does not enter into this cleansing process and become a permanent part of the working of the world toward better times and better things.

After a rain, how fresh is everything, as the sun comes out to dry and warm its creatures, both the dumb and green growing things and us who walk around and see the beautified earth and are inspired to earn, create and build.

I am of the opinion that even those who do no more than to appreciate are vital factors in blessing mankind.

For where would any of us be without appreciation?

I have no love for that art which is forever appraising the sordid and unclean in life and trying to pass itself off as a contribution to literature.

I would rather read Thoreau and walk with him among the rocks and have him tell me more about what birds do when they get discouraged or long before companionship. I would rather pick a dandelion and take it to some lone spot where I can hold communion with its secret wonders.

When we are clean in mind and body we are bound to have a feeling of newess and find in every expression about us something to lift us out of ourselves.

Analysis of Points at Issue in Charter Election

Today's Subject: Article VI., "System of Checking Officials and Finances"

Watkins-Atlanta Plan

Furnished Constitution by headquarters for Watkins charter plan.

The Atlanta-Watkins-City manager plan provides elaborate and adequate checks on expenditures of the city's money.

This is a budget committee of three, two of whom are elected by the people, and appropriations are made with consideration to the findings of the committee.

Appropriations having been made the board of aldermen's actual expenditures must be made by the chief of administration or under his directions by his assistants under his control. The comptroller, an independent officer appointed by the people's representatives, the board of aldermen, must first be shown that the expenditure means a dollar's worth of labor or goods before the dollar can be taken from the treasury.

Section 71 provides that the comptroller "shall have the legal supervision and control of all the fiscal affairs of the city." It shall be the duty of the comptroller "to keep the books of account and to make all financial reports. His books shall also exhibit accounts and detailed statements of all moneys received and expended for account of the city by all city officers and other persons and of the property owned by the city and the income derived therefrom." Separate accounts must be kept of each appropriation. He also checks all holders of franchises from the city. He, under section 72, audits all bills, claims and demands and must promptly report any existing shortage or discrepancy.

Proof of Claims.

He can require proof of all claims and may take evidence for or against any claim presented. Checks must be drawn by the head of the department and countersigned by the comptroller. He makes a report each month and annually and must give a bond for the faithful performance of his duties.

An independent audit of the comptroller and all other officers handling city property or spending city money is required "during each year," section 25, and a full report must be made at the end of each year.

Citizens may bring actions (Section 121) to prevent the misuse of public funds. No alderman, officer or employee can be interested in city contracts (Section 123).

Franchises cannot be granted for ten or more years unless by express vote of the people, nor can present franchises running longer than ten years be amended, without such approval (Sections 112, 113).

Check on Utilities.

Utilities owned by the city must be checked by the comptroller to protect the city from loss or theft and also so that it may be known what the operation of such utility is costing (Section 117).

Taxes cannot be higher than one and a half per cent, except with the consent of the people.

Last paragraph of Section 110: Accounts and records are open to public inspection (Section 122).

The people have a final check on all employes though the recall and referendum and they may amend the charter when they see proper. Section 135 provides that charter amendments proposed by initiative shall be voted on and if so ordered by the vote, "the board of aldermen shall request and urge the passage of such amendment by the legislature."

Choate Composite Plan

Furnished Constitution by headquarters for Choate composite charter plan.

The composite charter provides a most elaborate and efficient system of checking and accounting for the city's funds. It is far superior to the present system as well as to the system contained in the Watkins charter. The system contained in the composite charter is as follows:

All money paid to the city, by whatever person for whatever purpose, is paid to the city tax collector, who is heavily bonded. The tax collector is required to give a receipt for every collection he receives, showing the purpose for which the payment was made. The tax collector is required to make a daily reprot to the director of finance of collections received that day, and to accompany this report by duplicate receipt stubs. Thus every dollar he receives must be accounted for at the close of each day's business and with the report must go the receint stubs as corroboration.

The director of finance is made responsible for the custody of city funds and is heavily bonded. He may deposit the funds in designated banks, in which event the banks shall be bonded, or he may designate a treasurer to perform the depositing function, in which event the treasurer shall be bonded.

Authorization of Council.

No money shall be expended and no indebtedness shall be incurred by any department, or head of a department, except in accordance with specific appropriation authorized by the city council. When a claim is presented for payment of money by the city, such claim shall be audited and approved by the head of the department to which it is presented, and his voucher drawn on the director of finance shall show such audit and approval. The voucher goes to the chief of accounts, heavily bonded, who audits the same, charges it against the particular appropriation from which the money is to be drawn, and approves the voucher for final submission to the director of finance. The director of finance then draws his warrant for payment of the voucher.

These are the safeguards thrown around the collection and disbursement of the city's funds. Now as to the safeguards thrown around appropriations:

The composite charter creates a budget committee composed of the mayor, the president of the council and the director of finance. The committee is required to make each year, at the beginning of the year, an estimate of the city's expected revenues during that current year, and an estimate of appropriations for the several departments, and the latter estimate must not exceed the former.

The city council in making appropriations is required to stay within the estimate of revenue made by the committee. Council can appropriate the estimated revenue in whatever manner it sees fit, giving to each department what it thinks their respective requirements justify. But the council cannot exceed the estimated revenue in making appropriations. It can appropriate less than the estimated revenue, but cannot appropriate more.

Committee Responsible.

The budget committee is made responsible for staying within the city's revenue, when they make their estimate; the council is made responsible for staying within the estimate. Thus there cannot be, without liability, an aggregate appropriation in excess of the city's revenue.

The council is required to employ certified public accountants to make a continuous audit of the books of all departments, the books of the chief of accounts and of the director of finance. A continuous audit is not one where the auditor comes along at stated intervals, when all parties concerned are ready for him. It is an audit where any man's books are liable to be audited any day. It is the kind of audit used in all large business concerns.

Neither the present charter nor the Watkins charter provides such safeguards. The composite charter does not claim to be able to prevent human dishonesty, but it does throw such checks around the city's money that any embezzlement will be discovered the day it occurs, and not some months later, after it has mounted into thousands.

Present Charter Plan

Furnished Constitution by headquarters of present charter supporters.

In all collections, save as to one department, the city uses the triplicate check system; that is, there are three receipts or entries for every dollar paid. For instance, when you go to pay your taxes the assessor turns to a page, finds your name, tears out a duplicate receipt or entry, leaving one in the book. This duplicate receipt is carried to the tax collector, who receives your check, signs one of the receipts or coupons, which he hands to you, retaining the other for his office.

Both the tax assessor and the tax collector report daily to the comptroller, who checks over both reports. These reports are made up from the coupons retained in each office. The totals must correspond. Thus there is a daily audit. The chance of loss is reduced to a minimum.

The one excepted department is that of waterworks. The great majority of payments are small in amounts. Here the bill with coupon is sent or mailed to the user. He takes same to the tax collector, pays his water bill and leaves the coupon. This plan was adopted because of the vast number of users and the delay caused in making payments under the triplicate system. There is no daily audit as to these payments, but the water department and the comptroller know about what the receipts should be, and when they fail to show up, they detect the delay, and in addition all of the bills are completely checked once a month, so that any irregularity is at once discovered.

Approved by Bureau.

The coupon system has been approved by the census bureau of the United States, the highest authority in such matters. From time to time the city has an audit. At the last audit the examiners found everything in order and were so pleased with the system that they installed it in other cities.

As to finances, the present charter provides that when the three tax assessors complete their assessments for the year, the estimate of total receipts from taxation on real estate is turned over to the comptroller and the finance committee, and together the comptroller and the finance committee make an estimate of receipts from all sources, including taxation on personal property, waterworks receipts, business licenses and receipts from all other sources.

The finance committee then, assisted by the comptroller, early in January each year, makes a complete survey of the city's needs for the year, and distributes and apportions the estimated receipts to the various city departments. This results in what is known as the finance sheet or the budget. It is well to call attention to the fact that while the national government and the state government have for the past few years been struggling with suggestions looking to the establishment of budget systems, so necessary in connection with the administration of governmental affairs, the city of Atlanta has been operating under a complete and thorough budget system for so many years that people take it as a matter of course and have forgotten that we were ever without such a system. Does this look like inefficiency or a lack of proper business control or a failure to apply business principles to the administration of our city affairs?

The Budget System.

Coming back to the practical operation of the budget system, the charter makes illegal any expenditure beyond the sum apportioned to the particular object or department in the budget. No resolution providing for the expenditure of money can be considered by council unless it specifies the fund from which it is proposed to get the money, and further, unless such fund has the amount called for. No money can be spent unless a fund has been provided by vote of the council and aldermen, voting separately, and approved by the mayor. Furthermore, as an additional safeguard, any two councilmen can have the resolution held up for two weeks, and when the resolution gets to the aldermen one alderman can hold it up for another two weeks.

It would seem that these provisions and these checks exhaust the capacity of the human mind. It would be difficult to improve the system, but ill-advised changes could easily impair the system and the security. The system has been tested by time and experience. Do not surrender it for some new and untried experiment.

Our present plan has been in operation for forty-eight years, and no official, even if so inclined, has been able to get away with a dollar of the city's money without detection and without prompt restitution. How many private business concerns can show such a record?

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE GREAT LIVING FICTION.

Doctors are nearly as gullible as people. You would be surprised, and I do not mean to surprise you, to know how many second-rate physicians still betray their patients by ordering or prescribing concoctions of which they, the physicians, know nothing except the vague and often false information the exploiters of the connections impart. Some of these second-raters who use their patients in this shameless way are popularly regarded as great specialists or physicians; some of them are professors in medical colleges and noted authors of medical textbooks. I say doctors are about as gullible as folks.

Some doctors still tacitly approve if they do not actually prescribe the use of calomel as a cathartic. Long ago, before the era of physiology and before the invention of modern instruments of precision, there was a general belief that calomel had some special effect on the liver; that it stimulated the secretion or flow of bile, and that it was, therefore, a good remedy in all sorts of cases in which a "torpid" or inactive liver was fancied to be an important feature. The few doctors who now sanction the use of calomel as a cathartic endeavor to support their practice by ascribing to calomel some other effect, such as a fancied "antiseptic" action in the intestine—all of which is insignificant. Doctors or folks who use calomel today as a cathartic, use it because they imagine it increases the secretion or flow of bile, which it certainly does not do.

Mind you, I am not referring to the prescribing of calomel as a remedy against syphilis—it is the form of mercury which is most satisfactory in certain cases of syphilis.

I am a stanch believer in the efficacy of drugs when I am sick myself, but I want my medicines intelligently prescribed. I flatter myself that I know of medicines as well as a really good doctor does. But I am sorry for the child whose parents believe in calomel as a physic. I am sorry for the layman who harbors the notion that a "torpid liver" accounts for a torpid feeling. I am sorry for the woman who deludes herself that a sallow complexion indicates an inactive liver. I am sorry for the person that attributes so-called "liver spots" to some vague trouble with their liver. In short, I am a very sorry man. I am sorry for everybody that has swallowed an almanac without masticating the pages carefully. I fear my sorrow will get my liver out of order.

Calomel is by no means the only drug which purports to increase or improve the action of the liver in some desirable way. The woods are full of weeds or herbs to which some effects are fondly ascribed, with profit to the pill-makers, but no particular pleasure to the pill-takers, so far as I have ever been able to ascertain. All of these so-called liver pills or tablets, be they vegetable or mineral products, might do some good if fed judiciously to the sharks—the sea sharks, I mean.

Though it may seem incredible to the unenlightened reader, nevertheless it is the scientific truth that one may more certainly increase the action of the lungs by means of medicine than he can the action of the liver.

SERMONS TO LIVE BY

By Elam Franklin Dempsey, D. D.

Fear Mastered by Faith.

Text: "What time I am afraid, I will trust in Thee." Psalms 56:3.

Later in this Psalm, at verse 11, David again asserts his faith in God: "In God have I put my trust; I will not be afraid what man can do unto me."

Untold millions of the race of man have been born, have lived, and have died under the dominion of fear.

What a miserable slavery it is!

Who can deliver us from these bonds of fear?

A brave man, in all the meaning of that radiant word, who can find?

One Man only ever walked through this world without this demoralizing experience—the Master Man, Jesus of Nazareth.

Fearless He was because of His unfaltering trust in God—"I do always those things that are well pleasing unto Him."

Tortured by this ogre, fear, man has sought in many ways to master it.

The boy "whistles," we say, "to keep up his courage."

Grown older, he vaunts himself of his courage, "behaving himself unseemly," in a vain effort to convince not only others, but himself, that he is not afraid.

Moreover, as he goes on fighting this foe of his peace and poise he proceeds next to boisterous violence.

But the violent man is making his confession by his very violence that his emotions and feelings are not under the control of reason and conscience, through whose enthronement we alone can obtain fearlessness and courage.

The ghastly grin of fear leers behind every gunsight and back of every weapon in either persobal or national strife.

At last, it is our wisdom to learn that not by "whistling" (diverting attention), not by vaunting, not by violence, nor by combativeness can we exercise fear, but only by faith in God.

Faith in any one or anything will, for a time, master fear, so potent is faith in itself, but only an Infinite One can sustain an unfailing faith, and, therefore, a permanent freedom from fear.

Are you a victim of cringing, coward fear, in regard to any one or anything?

Smite the shackles from your soul by trust in God.

Does this mean, for you, a new relation to God?

Then, hasten to establish it at once!

CROPS ARE GENERALLY GOOD, DECLARES BROWN

With the exception of sections which suffered from inundation by the recent heavy rains and cold weather, crops throughout the state are in splendid condition, and farmers are greatly encouraged, it was announced Tuesday by Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown.

Mr. Brown returned Tuesday morning from a tour of inspection of southwest Georgia, where he attended a meeting of the central plains board at Tifton. This section is in excellent condition, he declared, and farmers are almost caught up with their planting, which was delayed by inclement weather early in the planting season.

THEATERS WILL HELP GET "BETTER FILMS"

Assurances that the Metropolitan and the Criterion theaters will co-operate in the work of the better films committee, and with the findings of the committee, have been given Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman of the committee of findings of the Southeastern Conference for Better Films, by Willard Patterson, manager of those theaters, according to an announcement made Tuesday.

In discussing the situation Mr. Patterson said that he "honestly believed that this will serve to make new history in the motion picture business."

Bunco Ring Member Sentenced in Texas For Swindle Scheme

According to reports received by C. E. Fleming, postoffice inspector, Tuesday, Mark Tillery, alleged right-hand man of Floyd Woodward, Atlanta's alleged bunco king, was sentenced to nine years in prison and to pay a fine of $1,500 in El Paso, April 29, for the fleecing of Thomas Kite out of $15,000 in a bunco game in Texas.

H. N. Graham, chief inspector, was one of the witnesses against Tillery. Tillery was acquitted in a case in Fulton superior court last year and was sent to Texas to answer this charge in the federal court.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, May 10.—Flung out from the facade of an old brown stone front in the Forties is a pebbly gilt sign heralding "The Stage Door Inn." It is the last stand of the chorus lady. Here with wearied eyes that catch no sparkle from myriad-blazoned lights she stands white-capped and white-aproned cast by trick of time to play the part of waitress.

About the dining room is the rapid hum of diners, mostly stage folk. And girls who valiantly hide twitching lips and struggling tears, wait on tables for small salaries and tips. The inn is a co-opreateive scheme to help jobless stage folk better over lean days while waiting for better times.

The menus try to make the girls feel they are not serving maids, and announces the names at each table as hostesses. Every day there is an entire new crew, and the waiting list runs into the hundreds, giving an idea of the deplorable lack of employment in the theater.

The hat check girls, the cashiers and the kitchen helpers are all girls who have had their dazzzling hours in the glare of the spotlight's flood. They come to work in molting fur coats and last season's shabby finery, and bring their Pekes and Poms. Many men they serve have waited for them at stage doors in the past.

The little brunette who waited at the table I occupied was in the front row of a musical hit last year. It was evident that she was trying to be brave while nursing the unconquerable hope. "I don't care, just so the folks don't find it out. They think I'm a leadingf lady, and the only thing I lead is Fifi, my dog," she said.

In the basement of the house is a shop where they sell needlework made by the jobless girls. On the floor above the inn are manicure and hair-dressing parlors. The evening I was there I saw Daniel Frohman, David Belasco, William Fox, Arthur Hopkins, Mary Nash, Tessa Costa, Geraldine Farrar and Leonore Ulric.

"Special Attention Paid to Other Girls' Fellows" is the invitation extended by a downtown manicure parlor, in large letters, on a sign that is being carried about the streets.

Frederick F. Vande Water, The New York Tribune's columnist, has written a book of true adventure, which tells the story of New York state's police. As "honorary member" of the force, Vande Water had exceptional opportunities to observe the "grey riders"—the title the book assumes incidentally—in action. The rural police have a problem more difficult than the intensive work of a city police force. Their charges are farflung. The criminal whom they pursue has territory the size of a Balkan kingdom in which to hide. And the "grey riders" are few in number. There are over 350 men patrolling by horse and motor vehicle a precinct limit to the Canadian line; from where the state reaches furthest westward to the New England border. Yet, in 1920, this handful of quiet grey horsemen arrested some eleven thousand persons, an average of about fifty per man. In the same year the New York city police, fond of hailing themselves as "the finest," made an average of 24 arrests per man per year.

Each day in City Hall park, some long-distance walker arrives with a paper for the mayor to sign to prove safe arrival. Ten walkers from distant points came to town last week. They are becoming so numerous that the mayor's private guard now refuses to usher them in the presence of his honor. So they wait for him on his nightly stroll across Brooklyn bridge.

Rotarians Hear Dexter Kimball, Engineer Leader

America is approaching the solution of many vital economic and social problems, and these problems must be solved from the ground up and not from the top down, President Dexter S. Kimball, of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, declared in an address delivered Tuesday at the regular luncheon of the Atlanta Rotary club. President Kimball and Secretary Calvin W. Rice, who are attending the annual meeting of the society now in session in Atlanta, together with other prominent members of the engineering organization, were special guests of the club.

"Rotary clubs of the world are on the right track in approaching these problems that face civilization with a distinctly human viewpoint," President Kimball declared. "We have many among us who want to solve them by war, others who are attempting to restrict certain liberties by legislation in an effort to solve them. But these courses are not the best in my viewpoint. They must be solved from the bottom up."

President Kimball and Secretary Rice called attention to adoption of certain Rotary principles in the work of their society, with special emphasis on establishment of a code of ethics. They said the idea of establishing a definite standard of ethics in business life is one of the big ideas of Rotary which is spreading.

One of the amusement features on the program was the presentation of a gift to Ben Cates, who was officially christened "Uncle Bim" Cates in honor of the celebration of the anniversary of his birthday.

An invitation was extended the Rotary club to participate in the "Made-in-Georgia" dinner to be given Wednesday, May 24, at the chamber of commerce. Members were requested to co-operate with the Atlanta Advertising club in the dinner-dance to be given by that organization on the roof of the Ansley hotel on the night of May 23.

Three new members of the club, W. F. Fish, of the American Bakeries company; W. B. Willingham, lumber manufacturer, and J. W. Harper, of the southern soil improvement committee, were presented to the club.

BOND COMMISSION OKAYS WATER PIPE

At a brief session Tuesday afternoon at city hall, the bond commission approved a report of its water committee recommending the purchase and laying of water pipe in nearly a score of streets, and acted on some detail in connection with the purchase of minor equipment for the waterworks program.

No formal mention of the Girls' High school site problem was made. In conversation after the meeting, members freely stated they were as much in the air as ever over the selection of a location.

The commission adopted a motion expressing its regret at the automobile accident last Saturday in which injuries were sustained by Frank M. Inman, bond commissioner, and Mrs. Inman, and extended its sympathy to the victims.

All the water mains approved Tuesday are to be laid of six-inch pipe, except Virginia avenue, where the main will be of twelve or sixteen-inch pipe. The cost, as estimated for purchase of the pipe, valves, hydrants, lead, calking, yarn, fittings, and miscellaneous tools and equipment, the cost of drayage and labor, will be approximately $39,421.

The list of improvements, which was submitted to the commission by Lee Ashcraft, chairman of the waterworks committee, is as follows:

Barksdale drive, from Maddox drive south 1,000 feet; Ormewood avenue, from Moreland to Brown avenue, 325 feet; Brown avenue, from Ormewood to Glenwood avenue, 2,286 feet; Franklin street, from Bellwood avenue to Wheeler street, 350 feet; Wheeler street from Chestnut street to Lindsey, 1,400 feet; Niles street, from Longley to Rice, 1,000 feet; Donnelly street, from Cascade avenue to Greenwood avenue, 636 feet; Grant street, from Elmira to Climax street, 1,000 feet.

Dalton street, from Grant to Hill, 800 feet; Smith street, from Rockwell south 2,000 feet; Monument avenue, from McPherson to Metropolitan avenue, 800 feet; Elizabeth street, from Copenhill to Williams' Mill road, 1,800 feet.

Eighth street, from Bedford to Jackson street, 1,500 feet; Sylvan way, 1,500 feet; Cascade place, from Beecher to Cherry, 500 feet; Lindsey street, from North avenue to Bellwood, 1,750 feet; Rose street, from Lee to White street, 2,000 feet; Virginia avenue, from Barnett street to the car barn, 2,200 feet, of twelve or sixteen-inch pipe.

COLLEGE STUDENT SHOT AND KILLED

Stillwater, Okla., May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—Beckham Cobb, 23, federal student at the Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical college here, was shot and killed just outside the campus today by Earl Gordon, 25, another federal student, while escorting the latter home at the point of a revolver to demand an apology to his pretty young wife for an alleged insult offered by Gordon. Both Cobb and Gordon served in the army during the war. Cobb was overseas.

Gordon in held in jail pending an investigation, but tonight no charges had been filed against him.

Bertie Sue Cobb, 18-year-old wife of Cobb, declared tonight that several nights ago Gordon met her on the street and insulted her. She had told her husband, she said.

Recently, she said, Gordon followed her into a motion picture house and seated himself beside her. She immediately left, she said.

The story of the killing was told tonight by Alvin Cannon, federal student, a friend of both men.

Met Two Principals.

Cannon said he came out of the chapel at noon and met Cobb and Gordon talking.

Gordon asked Cannon to go to his room, according to Cannon. Cobb walked with them. As they left the campus, according to Cannon, Cobb said to Gordon:

"Are you going down there with me?"

"No, I don't think I am," Gordon replied, Cannon said.

Cobb drew a revolver, Cannon said, and remarked: "I guess you will."

"Gordon then said: 'Put up your gun, I'll go along.'"

Cannon declared he then said: "Well, that let's me out if there is to be gun play." Cannon turned and walked away, he said.

Saw Shots Fired.

Cobb and Gordon walked on about 200 feet and Cannon said he turned just in time to see Gordon shoot Cobb. Cobb fell over a hedge into the corner of a yard and Gordon fired two more shots, Cannon stated. Cobb died instantly. Neither Cannon nor another eyewitness could say whether Cobb was in a prostrate position after the first shot or whether he attempted to use his weapon.

Witnesses reported that Cobb stepped out in front of Gordon just before the shooting began.

All three of Gordon's bullets took effect. One passed through the fleshy part of the shoulder; another through the neck to the right of the throat, and the third entered the bridge of the nose and ranged downward. The palms of both hands were pierced, indicating, it was said, that Cobb threw up his hands to protect himself.

Was On Otranto.

Records show that Cobb was on the transport Otranto when it was torpedoed during the war. He was injured and suffering from chronic bronchitis. Mrs. Cobb said she thought her husband had been gassed in France. She declared that he was unduly jealous.

Gordon did not make a detailed statement. "Cobb was after me," he said.

Cobb's home is at Birmingham, Ala. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. D. Cobb; two sisters and two brothers. He came to Stillwater with his wife, formerly Bertie Sue Wilson, of Enid, Okla., about two years ago. Mrs. Cobb was 15 when she married. Gordon's home is at Miami, Okla.

KIWANIS ENTERTAIN MEMBERS' MOTHERS

Preparatory to the general observance of Mother's day next Sunday, the Kiwanis club Tuesday held a Mother's day program, entertaining several Kiwanis mothers at their weekly luncheon.

The program, in charge of a committee composed of Jim Belcher, Sam Cohen and Grady Walker, was devoted entirely to a tribute to the mothers of the Kiwanians. Asa G. Candler delivered an appropriate address.

Songs fitted to the occasion were sung by Kiwanians Clarence Aldred and R. Floyd Jennings.

Every member of the club whose mother is living pledged himself to send her flowers to reach her on Sunday, Mother's day.

ALTERED AUTO TAG TAKEN ON ALLEGED WHISKY VEHICLE

A 1921 automobile license tag remoulded to represent 1922 and painted green and white to bear out the color scheme of this year's tags, was brought Tuesday to the office of Secretary of State S. G. McLendon in the state capitol following arrest of the driver of the automobile from which the tage was removed in Forsyth county on a charge of violating the prohibition laws.

The tag, No. 118-231 Georgia 1921, is said to have been first detected as counterfeit when an officer of Forsyth county endeavored to obtain from the secretary of state's office the person to whom the number had been issued in 1922 and was told that the license numbers issued thus far this year had not reached that numeral as yet. He immediately brought the tag to Secretary McLendon's office where the alleged "doctoring" was detected.

"I intend to prefer charges against the man who was arrested in the automobile with the bogus license number," declared Mr. McLendon Tuesday. "He is guilty of violating the motor vehicle law, which is punishable with a fine of $1,000 and a jail sentence of one year.

"One other case of similar nature where a number was changed from 1921 to 1922 has been brought to my attention. I intend to prefer similar charges against the person arrested in connection with this case also."

The entourage will stop off in the principal cities of Texas, Kansas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and California along the Lincoln highway. Mr. Stanford was invited to join a number of Shriners from Washington who were in Atlanta Sunday, but was unable to leave at that time. He is a member of Abba temple, of Mobile, Ala.

HUTCHESON WANTS SCHOOL FOR BLIND

A move to establish a department for the blind in Atlanta's educational system will be made at the meeting of the board of education Wednesday afternoon by Commissioner Carl Hutcheson, it was learned Tuesday.

The effort to provide local school facilities for the blind is being strongly supported by Attorney Paul Donehoo, Fulton county's blind coroner, it was further learned.

Employment of an instructor for blind pupils would be authorized in a resolution to be introduced at the meeting of the board Wednesday by Commissioner Hutcheson, he announced Tuesday.

HARDWICK LEAVES FOR SANDERSVILLE

A wire was received Tuesday morning by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick from Sandersville to the effect that his daughter, Mrs. Fred B. Rawlings, of that place, had suffered a serious attack of illness late Monday afternoon.

Governor Hardwick, accompanied by Mrs. Hardwick, left immediately for Sandersville to be with Mrs. Rawlings, who is their only child. It will probably be the latter part of this week before the governor will return to his office.

"Button, Button" Part of Frolic Progress Week

BY FUZY WOODRUFF.

There was a favored game of childhood, predominant at polite parties, called "Button, button, who's got the button." There are no rules for "button, button, who's got the button," promulgated by Hoyle, A. G. Spalding or Walter Camp. If recollection of persons who have long since laid aside the things of childhood serves correctly, "button, button, who's got the button, involved osculation, which was not entirely grown out of fashion in this progressive day and time.

Anyhow, during progress and prosperity week, May 29 to June 3, all Atlanta and so much of Georgia and the southeast attending the festivities will play "button, button, who's got the button" under rules and regulations and constitutions and by-laws made and provided by Roy Booker, Joe Chandler Harris, Jr., A. G. Adams, J. G. Blount and Elliott Cheatham.

Roy Booker elucidated the plan Tuesday. First of all there will be a distribution from downtown booths of progress and prosperity buttons, 25,000 of them all told, and they had just as well have added patriotism and made the "P's" unanimous, as the buttons will be red, white and blue.

Each of the buttons will be numbered individually. From 500 to 1,000 of the buttons will have duplicate numbers.

Now's here how you play the game. You are the proud possessor of a button and you go about from May 15 on looking for the man, woman or child, whose button is a duplicate of yours. When he, she or it is discovered, report to 614 Chamber of Commerce building and get a ticket to all the attractions at Lakewood park during progress and prosperity week, and there will be plenty of attractions.

A number of committees were called together Tuesday immediately following the big general progress and prosperity committee meeting of Monday night to perfect plans for carrying out the work assigned to them. Among those meeting were the Civitans, who are to work with Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson in arranging for pageantry which will constitute a portion of two days' program of the festivities at Lakewood.

The Music Festival association committee also met during the day with Mrs. Jackson to arrange for the production of the light opera "Mikado." Other committees from time to time will perfect arrangements incident to the program.

The tremendous work of arranging the program is under the direct supervision of Lucian York, with a number of assistants, all under the direction of R. M. Striplin, general chairman of the event. The work of this committee with its various subcommittees from the different organizations of the city is one of the most important phases of the entire project.

All matters pertaining to Atlanta's great festival week are well in hand, and are being carried forward with every assurance of success.

POLICE ARE ASKED TO LOCATE CHILDREN

Police were asked Monday night to locate Harris Kennedy, 15 years old of 46 Scott street, and Hoke Smith Gillespie, of 181 Luckie street. Both are reported to have left home early Monday morning. The police were also asked to look for Dora Pharr, 15 year-old girl of Washington, D. C., and Percy Rycraw, 16; Vestus Wright, 17, and Thurman Duncan, 15, all of Tuscaloosa, Ala. They are said to have run away from home.

A regular examination fee of $1 to cover the cost of materials used in the tests will be assessed each applicant. Mr. Hunter said an unusually large number of applicants will take the examination this year. Many are from small Georgia towns and cities, he said.

The program for the tests follows:

USEFUL LIFE URGED BY NEGRO SPEAKER

Richard D. Stinson, of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute, addressing a congregation at Amanda Flipper Memorial A. M. E. church last night on the value of a useful life, said:

"It is your duty and mine to be decent and useful, to love honest hard work and truthfulness. Our race has had so many good opportunities to help ourselves and to be of service in the communities where we live and to demand the good feeling of others, that we suffer if we do not redeem these opportunities.

"The negro has made great strides in a forward direction since 1865. The common-sense schoolhouse and good teachers directed in the proper way, have done much to keep us sober and sensible, and yet our responsibilities ahead of us are far greater than any we have come in contact."

Many negro leaders were present. The students of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute sang.

Song Prologue For Photoplay At the Howard

Large crowds at the Howard theater Tuesday enjoyed a spectacular prologue entitled, "The Enchanted River and Forest Fire," presented for the first time in the south under the direction of Enrico Leide, assisted by a chorus ensemble of 50 voices under the supervision of Signor Emilio Volpi. The spectacle was given as a prologue to the presentation of the photoplay production, "Beyond the Rocks."

In adapting the big spectacle, Mr. Leide uses effectively Straus' beautiful waltz, "The Blue Danube," and Aida's Triumphal march. Marvelous scenic effects are used in the production. The curtain rises on the 50 singers on the stage singing the opening strains of "The Blue Danube." As the overture is sung, a beautiful lighting arrangement shows the enchanted river. Suddenly an electric storm arises and the music changes to the march from "Aida." In the latter part of the number a forest fire is produced which finally ends in a blaze of kaleidoscopic colors.

The audience encored the massive spectacle at every presentation Tuesday. Mr. Leide directed the entire production with Signor Volpi assisting with the ensembles.

Following are the singers in the choral ensemble:

Mesdames Madeline Hower, Vivian Baker, W. J. Craig, Jennie Gavin Dean, Louise Entreken, E. Hower Minnie Langley, Charles Maddox, Elsa Stenger, E. Stenger, Olive Walker, Nellie Young, Nora Iplov, D. WAR FRAUD CASES CAUSE HOUSE ROW

Daugherty Transmits Defense of Justice Department's Handling of Cases, But Members Are Bitter.

Washington, May 9.—In a detailed statement concerning the prosecution of war fraud cases, prepared at the request of the president, and transmitted today to the house, Attorney-General Daugherty declared that examinations so far completed disclosed in each instance "sufficient indication that a crime has been committed to warrant submitting them to a grand jury."

Presented on the eve of a republican caucus, called to consider a legislative program, including a republican resolution for investigation of charges of alleged laxity in prosecution by the department of justice, the attorney-general's letter provoked a partisan row in which Representative Garrett, the democratic leader, broadly intimated that it was intended to smother the proposed investigation.

Representative Mondell, the republican leader, to whom Mr. Daugherty's letter was sent by the president, did not indicate in reply to a question on the floor as to whether it meant the resolution, already given privileged status by the rules committee, never would be heard from again.

Threatens Impeachment.

Taking issue with the attorney-general, Representative Woodruff, republican, Michigan, declared the former was requested six months ago to appeal to congress for half a million dollars to clear up his war-time docket and that he never acted until republicans had assailed the department in the house. Mr. Woodruff reiterated that unless the attorney general allowed the courts to decide the pending case against the Lincoln Motor company "on its merits, I will move his impeachment in the house of representatives." The Michigan representative asserted that a republican congress could "not face the country in an election unless it clears up war fraud cases which smell to high heaven."

Charging that "little or nothing" had been done by the former administration to bring war robberies to light, Mr. Daugherty wrote the president the country would soon have reason to know that "influential persons in the government who had knowledge of these transactions and were in a position to make disclosures, were personally interested in concealing them." The department, he said, was handling upward of 200 war contract cases, and if recoveries were obtained in all, the total would reach $100,000,000.

Made Through Probes.

It was a terrible thing, the attorney-general said, to charge a citizen with robbing his own government, and for that reason he had insisted upon a painstaking investigation of all cases involving charges of criminality. It was regrettable, too, he declared, that public attention "should have been so strongly focused on these cases on the eve of their prosecution."

Given a special fund of $500,000, and with the passage of pending bills for twenty-three additional judges and an additional grand jury in the District of Columbia, Mr. Daugherty said the work of clearing the dockets would be accelerated. Two cases of "the first magnitude" were ready for prompt submission, he said, adding, however, that investigation showed others "lurking in the shadows" and involved in the unlawful transaction, and that principals and different groups of individuals in other parts of the country might be soon indicated.

Mr. Daugherty reiterated what he said recently concerning the case of the Lincoln Motor company involving "alleged irregularities in connection with the adjustment of a contract with that company for the manufacture of Liberty motors."

U. S. Claim Filed.

Tracing the various stages of litigation, Mr. Daugherty said that after hearing counsel for the receiver and others interested he had concluded that the matter should be submitted to judicial determination "and, accordingly, the government's claim was filed within the time allowed."

In this connection the attorney-general sent to the president a letter from Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, of the eastern district of Michigan, referring to "the recent newspaper notoriety" and saying that Representative Woodruff was "entirely mistaken in making criticism" of the attorney-general and the department of justice "in anything which has happened or failed to happen up to this time in protecting the government's interests."

At the conclusion of the reading Mr. Mondell said that the attorney general's wishes would be compiled with "to the end that all who defrauded the government will be brought to justice."

"Passing the Buck."

"The attorney-general comes along now after fourteen months," said Mr. Woodruff, "and asks congress for $560,000 with which to prosecute war frauds. The chairman of the war investigating committee, Mr. Graham, more than six months ago wrote the attorney-general and urged him to ask of congress sufficient funds for the purpose. The attorney-general is doing today just exactly what many other heads of departments have done in the past—passing the buck to congress."

Representative Garner, democrat, Texas, asked Mr. Mondell if he intended to pass the Woodruff investigation resolution.

"At the proper time and in the proper way that question will be answered," the republican leader replied.

Declaring that democrats had not opposed republican resolutions for investigating the war, Mr. Garrett wanted to know if the attorney-general's letter meant that the Woodruff measure was dead.

"It was introduced by responsible republicans," he said, "and reported out by the rules committee. In answer to that what does the attorney-general say. He says 'don't investigate my department but give me half a million dollars; don't investigate, but give me twenty-three more judges; don't investigate but give me another grand jury.' And the republican leader tells you the congress will give all he wants speedily."

COLORED PHYSICIANS MEET IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) The Georgia State Association of Colored Physicians and Pharmacists began its annual convention here today in the St. Philip's A. M. E. church, with an open meeting at the Monumental A. M. E. church tonight. Meetings will be held during the remainder of the convention at the First African Baptist and other colored churches. Several hundred delegates are present. Clinics conducted by negro surgeons will feature tomorrow and Thursday sessions, with probably more than fifty operations of various kinds.

FARM DEMONSTRATOR EMPLOYED BY ELBERT

Elberton, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Through the generosity of the business men of Elberton, Elbert county now has a farm demonstrator, W. D. Hnie, who has taken up the work where it was left off when it was held that the county cou'd not use its funds to pay such employees. Arrangements have also been made to continue Miss Lula Peck as demonstrator among the girls, and women of the county.

HORNE COMPANY SELLS WELL-KNOWN CABINETS

A regrettable error in the advertising columns of The Constitution occurred Tuesday morning, when it was made to appear that the Horne Desk & Fixtures company were not handling the well-known line of Shaw-Walker Filing Cabinets and supplies. These widely advertised and popular steel files have been handled for some time, and are still sold by the Horne Desk & Fixture company at 89 North Pryor street.

The name of the Horne Desk & Fixture company should have appeared at the bottom of the Shaw-Walker advertisement above referred to, this error occurring in the advertising department caused by the similarity of two pieces of copy.

The Constitution is pleased to correct this error and to advise its readers that Shaw-Walker files, "built like a sky-scraper," are still handled in Atlanta only by the above named firm.

MILAN OFFICER DIES OF WOUNDS AT MACON CLINIC

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—W. D. Doc Willis, city marshal of the town of Milan, who was wounded in a gun battle in Milan on April 16, died at the clinic in Macon, late this afternoon.

The marshal was brought here on April 17 and underwent an operation. He showed improvement for a time, but during the last few days had been gradually sinking and his death was not unexpected.

Following the shooting, Felton Cauley and Lamar Cauley, brothers, were arrested and lodged in jail at McRae. A warrant also was issued against a third brother who later was arrested, Vane E. Cauley.

The Cauleys' were transferred to the Bibb county jail for safe keeping and it was only recently that they were returned to Telfair county.

The trouble in which the marshal was shot occurred on the main street of Milan, near a drug store, while the marshal is said to have been in conversation with another man, the Cauleys' are alleged to have advanced on him from different directions, opening fire on him. Three bullets entered his body, one penetrated the stomach, another the shoulder and a third the forearm.

After being shot and while lying on the ground, the marshal fired three shots at Felton Cauley, wounding him once and he was about to fire on one of the Cauleys', when he observed a woman in range and he did not shoot.

VEAZY LAW IS CONDEMNED IN RICHMOND

Augusta, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Without referring to any statute by name, Judge Henry C. Hammond, in superior court Tuesday morning, condemned the Veazy law as "un-American and unnecessary."

The matter came up during the course of the judge's address to the court.

The grand jury incorporated the following paragraph in its report with respect to the investigation of charitable institutions:

"Your committee feels that it is a waste of valuable time of its citizens acting as a grand jury, and also a waste of the county's money, to make inspections of eleemosynary institutions."

Judge Hammond said he was much impressed by this statement of the grand jury, as he fully concurred with them. He said that while all must necessarily be guided by laws that have been placed on the statute books from time to time, some laws prove a burden to the public, in that they are un-American and unnecessary, and are a waste of time in their enforcement.

CITY PLAN BOARD TO ASSERT POWER

Notice of its intention to strictly enforce the state law requiring the commission's approval of all plats of land subdivisions within the city of Atlanta and anywhere in Fulton county within six miles of the city limits, was given by the city planning commission Tuesday.

Robert H. Whitten, consultant to the commission, said that following the "own your home" exposition the need for regulating subdivisions will be emphasized more than ever.

The statement of the planning commission is as follows:

"The city planning commission gave notice of its intention to strictly enforce the state statute requiring the commission's approval of all plats of land subdivisions. This applies not only to subdivisions within the city of Atlanta but to those located anywhere in Fulton county with six miles of the city limits. This control is exercised for the protection of lot buyers and the public generally.

Each subdivider of land into streets and lots must have a careful survey of his property made and have a carefully prepared plat recorded in the office of the clerk of the superior court. This plat before being received must have the approval of the planning commission and the general council. Any person who sells lots without having his plat approved and recorded is subject to a fine.

"From now on the operator who subdivides land into streets and lots must do so with due regard to the public interest in the continuation of existing streets, the widening of major traffic routes, the establishment of uniform building lines and lot widths, and the appropriate improvement of adjoining properties.

"The commission believes that the time to plan a city is at the time it is originally subdivided into streets and lots. The city is spreading out so rapidly that if this control over new subdivisions is exercised, there will soon be a very large, well planned area in which the haphazard street layout which handicaps most of the present built up sections will happily be lacking."

CUPID OUTWITS ANGRY FATHER IN SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Cupid scores again.

Evan Thompson was engaged to Miss Leslie Shuman, residing near here. Thompson was bagged in the prohibition dragnet and had to have a bondsman. R. L. Shuman, father of the young man's fiancee, went on his bond.

Then Shuman discovered the existence of the engagement and was wroth.

Immediately he surrendered young Thompson to federal officers, to head off the marriage. Today Thompson's father came to Savannah and made a new bond.

And the young man found his sweetheart awaiting him.

As soon as the new bond was made the United States commissioner was asked to perform the marriage ceremony, which he could not do. A local minister united the couple. The girl is said to be 16.

SIXTH DISTRICT SCHOOL EXERCISES

Richard Wagner, the great composer, was the youngest of nine children.

Judge Expected To Confirm Sale Of Railroad

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—R. P. Ingram, receiver for the Hawkinsville and Florida Southern railroad, tomorrow will ask that Judge H. A. Mathews, in superior court, confirm the sale today of fifty-one miles of the southern end of the road, from Ashburn to Camilla, to the Pidcock interests, of Moultrie, and to 300 other stockholders in the newly organized company which will take over the road. J. N. Pidcock, of Moultrie, who probably will be president, and Dr. T. C. Jeffords, of Sylvester, bid in the road as trustees for the new concern, the Georgia, Ashburn, Sylvester and Camilla Railroad company, at $125,000 today.

The opinion was expressed this afternoon that Judge Mathews will approve the sale, as $125,000 was the price fixed for the southern end. The receiver was ordered to receive $225,000 in the entire transaction, and it is regarded as easily probably that $100,000 will be made out of the other forty-ore miles from Hawkinsville to Worth.

There were no bids on the northern end of the line. W. M. Legg, of Albany, president of the Georgia, Southwestern and Gulf, was expected to bid and was present, but took no part in the proceedings. It was intimated this afternoon, however, that a movement similar to the one which bought the southern end is under way and may result in the northern end, with the exception of the sixteen-mile section from Pitts to Worth, being sold.

In the party from south Georgia were Dr. Jeffords and C. W. Hillhouse, from Sylvester; T. A. Acree, Sr., and T. A. Acree, Jr., of Camilla; J. L. Evans, J. N. Raines, W. F. Stevens, N. V. Finash and A. M. Joiner, of Ashburn, and J. N. Pidcock.

South Georgia Counties Await Federal Aid

Dougherty Has $225,000 Road Funds to Be Matched by Government.

BY H. T. M'INTOSH.

Albany, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Several counties in this section of the state are much interested in the future of federal aid in highway building, aside from the prospect of a state bond issue.

Dougherty is among these counties. Of a $400,000 bond issue authorized in 1919, about $225,000 remains in the county treasury. The other part of the proceeds of the issue was expended as the county's share of the cost of constructing the handsome bridge which spans the Flint at Albany and paving several miles of road on the Dixie highway south of this place. The United States government shared half the cost of both these projects.

But federal money gave out before Dougherty county could obtain appropriations to match the remaining $225,000, and for nearly a year it has remained in the treasury.

The county commissioners have placed the money at interest and the county receives an amount equivalent to that called for by the bond interest coupons, but the desire of the county authorities and the public is to have the money spent in the building of more paved roadway in the county. It can be used for no other purpose.

Other counties in south Georgia have money awaiting appropriations to similar projects. In some instances the bonds are being held, though Dougherty's entire issue was sold at a good price before the slump in the bond market occurred. The Dougherty county plan is to pave entirely through from the Lee county line to the Mitchell county line, a distance north and south of thirteen miles, exclusive of the distance through Albany.

TWO LEGISLATORS HURT IN WRECK

Senator Vance Peacock and Representative Howard Coates Injured in Automobile Accident.

Barnesville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Senator Vance Peacock and Representative Howard Coates, of Hawkinsville, were seriously injured just above Milner early today, when the Buick roadster driven by Mr. Coates hit a sign at the railroad crossing, turning the car over and practically demolishing it.

Mr. Peacock probably had two or three ribs broken, and both men were considerably bruised and lacerated. They were brought to Barnesville by friends and given rooms and medical attention at Hotel Barnesville. They are resting well today, but it may be two or three days before the extent of their injuries are known. The place where the accident occurred is at a sharp turn at the railroad crossing, just beyond Milner, which is a dangerous curve to one unacquainted with the road.

ALLEGED SLAYER ON TRIAL IN BIBB

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—London Owens, one of the four negroes charged with the murder last December of A. Lee Aligood, Ocmulgee line street car motorman-conductor, was placed on trial for his life this afternoon at 4 o'clock before Judge H. A. Mathews in superior court. Ten witnesses were used by the state and court recessed at 7:30 o'clock until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Bob Burkett, Jack Smiley and Emmett Smith, alias Charlie Smith, jointly indicted with Owens, will probably be tried as soon as the Owens case is concluded.

Burkett, who is said to have confessed, and who is one of the state's principal witnesses, was not placed on the witness stand today.

Tom Howard, Ruth Womack and Rosa Lee Davis, negroes, were the principal witnesses used by the state. They testified that they were standing on a hill a short distance from the scene of the tragedy. Efforts were made to break down their testimony, but they were unshaken.

Howard testified that he was standing in the kitchen of his house when the first shot was fired, and he rushed out into the yard, where the Womack woman and the Davis girl had "made an alarm."

"I saw two men run away from the car and head toward the woods on the other side of the car," Howard said, "but I couldn't tell whether they were white men or negroes." Then in answer to another question Howard said, "Yes, sir, I saw the street car man stagger out of the car, and then he dropped down on the ground."

Ruth Womack substantiated practically all of Howard's testimony, but Rosa Lee Davis, who said she was out in the yard when the disturbance started, was more positive and far-reaching in her testimony, and went far enough to identify Owens as the man who did the shooting.

NEGROES REMOVED TO BIBB JAIL FOR SAFE KEEPING

Macon, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Jim and Will Drisdom, negroes, who were in the hands of a Johnson county mob several weeks ago, following the attempted robbery of a prominent woman, failing in which her clothing was set on fire, were delivered to the Bibb county jail late today for safekeeping.

CHATHAM BOND ELECTION SUCCESS

Savannah, Ga., May 9.—(Special.) Bonds won in an election here today to authorize a quarter of a million for the Chatham county share of the $700,000 Georgia-Carolina bridge project here; and for the expenditure of another quarter of a million on the improvements of old roads in the Chatham county system.

A little more than 7,000 votes were necessary. There were more than 8,000 favorable ballots polled.

U.S. Judge Evans Is Laid to Rest In Sandersville

Sandersville, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Judge Beverly D. Evans, who who died suddenly in Savannah Sunday night, was laid to rest beside the remains of his son, Lieutenant Beverly D. Evans, Jr., who was killed during the world war, and the body of his wife, here, late this afternoon.

Hundreds of prominent Georgians attended the last rites paid the late United States district judge, the ceremonies being simple, but very impressive. Active pallbearers were members of Judge Evans' Sunday school class in Savannah.

Services were held at the First Baptist church, conducted by Dr. John E. White, who was his pastor in Atlanta for a number of years. Dr. White pail a high tribute to Judge Evans, and his loyalty as a friend, citizen and jurist. More than seven hundred people packed the church, several hundred being unable to obtain admittance, stood on the outside with bared heads in silent tribute.

The floral tributes were very beautiful, one in particular was an immense piece from the Baraca class of Savannah. Members of the Savannah bar acted as honorary pallbearers.

All places of business were closed this afternoon and the city schools were given a half holiday out of respect for the deceased.

Two special Pullman's left Sandersville tonight to carry the Savannah party home.

WATKINS ASSAILS LAW IN BUSINESS

St. Louis, Mo., May 9.—(Special.) Legislative and administrative action which unduly hampers business results in injury to the public, according to Edgar Watkins, prominent lawyer, of Atlanta, in an address delivered Tuesday afternoon before the convention of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association in session in St. Louis.

Mr. Watkins indorsed, in his speech, the proposed Edge trade bill now pending in congress. Mr. Watkins declared that legislative and administrative co-operation with business is not bad but said hampering action brings injury to the general public. In discussing the relief the Edge bill would give, if passed, Mr. Watkins said:

The Edge trade bill now pending in the congress has as its general purpose the recognition of co-operative associations such as the Southern Wholesale Grocers' association. The general ideas proposed by that bill are similar to those of the original proponents of the act creating the federal trade commission. Such a bill, if passed, will be helpful to all legitimate co-operative organizations and this association shall be glad to see a law that will permit the useful purposes of this and similar organizations.

Decree Is Filed To Bar Monopoly In Sugar Trade

New York, May 9.—After twelve years of involved legal fighting, the government has at last broken up the sugar trust.

The end of the sugar case Tuesday was a mere formality—the real victory having been achieved last December, when the attorneys for the sugar interests agreed to the tentative form of dissolution decree which has just been entered on the court of records here.

It means that the principal sugar refining concerns in the United States are barred from combining to fix prices or control output or from operating as one concern through the interlocking directorate device.

The action, started in 1910, was halted several years ago pending decisions from the United States supreme court on the steel trust and International Harvester cases involving similar points in the Sherman anti-trust law. From the outcome of these suits it was apparent to the attorneys for the sugar interests that they probably would lose if they attempted to carry their defense through to the supreme court.

Accordingly, they went to the department of justice at Washington last December, and with Attorney-General Daugherty, agreed upon the form of the decree which was officially made a matter of record here Tuesday.

This decree, filed in federal court by Judges Rogers, Hough and Manton, specifically enjoins the American Sugar Refining company from increasing its present holdings of 25 per cent in the stock of the National Sugar Refining company, of New Jersey, and its comparatively small interests in the Great Western Sugar company and the Michigan Sugar company.

It also provides that the American Sugar Refining company can not elect as its own officers or directors any officials connected with any of these three companies, thus breaking up the interlocking directorate in the sugar industry permanently.

Attorneys for the sugar interests, when they agreed to the tentative decrees last December, stated their clients had already complied with these stipulations, having decided that to fight the case further was useless in view of the decisions of the higher courts in the other anti-trust cases which involved identical questions.

NO EVIDENCE GIVEN IN RAST DEFENSE

Orangeburg, S. C., May 9.—The defense declined to offer evidence when the state closed its case today against Claude J. Rast, charged with attempting to attack a pupil when he was principal of a county school here, and two arguments had been completed before adjournment tonight.

Details of the affair which was said to have taken place at recess were described and it was alleged Rast sought to get the girl and her cousin to keep quiet about [illegible] indictment named the time as in December, 1920, it was brought out that the warrant on which Rast was sought when the girl's story became known to her parents last July set the time as in May, 1921.

The arguments and the judge's charge remain to be [illegible]

Mrs. Perdue Gives Pretty Luncheon At Chapter House

Whole trees of roses, with gay-colored butterflies poised in them, and even birds of bright plumage adorned the luncheon table yesterday at the club house of the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., when Mrs. John Albert Perdue, president of Atlanta chapter, entertained Tuesday in honor of the executive board and the chairmen of the building fund committees.

The meeting of the board took place at 11 o'clock, this being the last meeting of the administration, which will go out of office Thursday.

The luncheon was served at a table set the length of the living room, which seated forty-eight ladies.

Three trees of pink roses were the main decorations, and crystal vases of roses in shades of red and pink and in all variety alternated with vases of pink and yellow snap dragons. The table cover and napkins were flowered in pink and crystal candlesticks burned pink candles. The menu was most tempting.

Before the service of the salad course, the occasion had become a love feast, with board members, one after another, rising to voice their enjoyment of their meal with Mrs. Perdue and to speak tribute of affection and appreciation for her.

Among those speaking were Mrs. Joseph Morgan, pioneer in the service of the confederacy and an original officer of the chapter; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, an ex-president; Mrs. Bun Wylie, vice president; Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith and many others.

Messages of sympathy were telephoned during luncheon to Mrs. A. McD. Wilson and Mrs. Earl Scott, who are ill.

Motion Picture Of Girl Scouts.

Josephine Daskam Bacon, noted author, who is so familiar with girl life, has written the scenario for the Golden Eaglet, the story of a Girl Scout, which will be presented at the Howard Theater Saturday morning at 10 o'clock under the auspices of and for the benefit of the Atlanta Girl Scouts.

Margaret Ferris is the heroine. She is a flapper, to start with, bored with everything.

A sprightly troop of Girl Scouts trudged by on a hike to camp in the great outdoors. They were dressed in the scout service uniform, which permits no undemocratic comparisons; they wore no jewelry and no finery; their step was elastic and their stride resolute; they bore their paraphernalia proudly; and in their beaming young faces was the glow of health, generated in communion with nature's own, the look of eager anticipation the mirrored picture of happy souls devoted to service and accomplishment. They were going somewhere! Going by limousine conveyance? No! With mere money? No! "Going on their own momentum, exuberance, girl power!

"That looks interesting and I should like to try it," exclaimed Margaret. "I wonder why they never taught me about the scouts at home."

"Oh, you have to work so hard," returned her companion.

But Margaret goes in, and then the picture grows exciting with her exploits.

Admission will be 10 cents for children, 20 cents for adults.

Miss Jennie Dargan's kindergarten orchestra will be an added feature.

A Wife on Leave

Who's Who and What's Happened.

Sally Brabant, a society butterfly, has been given a year's leave of absence by her husband,

Richard Brabant, who hopes that she will learn something of life. She sees much of Keith Gilbert, who has always been labeled "dangerous," and is horrified to learn that, despite his position in society, he is a bootlegger. Her husband goes west and she finds herself without money or a home. Attempting to earn her living, she secures a position as chaperon to

Claire Finch, who has more money than manners. They go to a summer resort, where Claire falls in love with

Rex Mallory, who in turn loses his heart to a little cabaret dancer,

Rose Hewitt, whom Sally befriends. Claire elopes with an adventurer and Sally returns to New York.

Sally goes to the studio of an artist,

Lee Craig, and hears that

Barbara Lane, an old friend, is accepting the attentions of a financier,

Graham Browne, despite the fact that she is married.

CHAPTER LXXV.
Deep Waters.

"Of course I love Andy more than anyone else in the world," declared Barbara Lane. "But Andy's different now, Sally; he's so busy, so taken up with his work, that I hardly see him. It's dreadful. And when he is here at home alone with me, he's so tired that all he can think of is going to bed!"

They were sitting in the living room at Wee-acre, the room which Babs and Andy had furnished so carefully and with such delight when they bought the house in the spring. Now cosmos was blooming, instead of lilacs, and goldenrod waved in the fields that led down to the river.

"You were happier when you and Andy were painting furniture and trying to stretch your income to have the roof shingled, weren't you?" asked Sally, softly. "What is it, Babs—has success come between you and Andy."

"I'm afraid it has," Barbara answered, slowly. "Mr. Graham Browne came to dinner one evening, after the time we met him at that house party, and he was interested in Andy's invention at once. He used to come here often. Then he financed a company to market it, and let them use one of his factories, over in New Jersey; Andy had to be there a great deal. And he's been very nice to me so that I wouldn't be lonely when Andy was away."

Sally stared at her in amazement. It was unthinkable, of course—yet possible, too, that Graham Browne, falling in love with Babs, had gone deliberately to work to come between her and her husband. Certainly he had chosen a clever way of doing it! She recalled everything that she knew about Browne. It was unlike him to be so considerate of others when no benefit for himself was involved. Sally remembered her own desperate appeal to him for help, when she feared Keith Gilbert so, and his refusal to believe that her fears were well grounded.

And of course, Barbara would not believe that he could be guilty of deceiving her. Her life had always gone on evenly, without any such upheavals as those that Sally had faced since her husband's departure for the west. She would have to be freed from this entanglement without knowing of its existence.

Sally realized that Barbara was unusually guileless; that where many women would have understood the situation at once, Barbara was so unsophisticated that she would not grasp its real meaning. She herself was so beautifully honest that it would not occur to her to suspect the motives of anyone else. Sally sighed; she wondered if the affairs of men and women were always so tangled. Here was Graham Browne evidently devoted to Babs, who in turn worshipped her husband, but thought that he cared less for her than formerly. And here was Lee Craig, famous and popular, caring for Browne. Yes, and here was she, Sally Brabant, in love with a husband who apparently had forgotten all about her!

"Of course I love Andy more than anyone else," declared Babs.

Rose Hewitt was the only one who was happy and her affairs had certainly been upset enough in the very recent past. They had seemed hopeless, of course—and the very fact that they had been straightened out so satisfactorily gave Sally reason to hope.

"Mr. Browne has done such awfully nice things for me, and taken me to such interesting places," Barbara went on. "For instance, tomorrow morning he's taking me to a dress rehearsal of a new opera at the Metropolitan; why don't you come with us, Sally? I'd love to have you, and he said that I might bring anyone I liked."

"I'd love to come, dear," Sally answered quickly. She really wanted to go, and she wanted, too, to see Babs and Graham Browne together. She felt that she must do something to keep Barbara from drifting away from her husband and becoming too appreciative of Browne's kindness; then, too, it might be possible for her to make him see that the world in which Babs lived was not like his, and that the free and easy exchanging of wives and husbands to which he was accustomed was not the custom among her friends.

She walked up Broadway slowly the next morning—a morning brilliant in the autumn sunshine, which made even dingy Broadway look attractive. To Sally it was interesting even with the great electric signs merely a meaningless mass of bulbs, and the sidewalks thronged with theatrical folk, most of them actors out of work. All about her Sally heard scraps of conversation—"Three weeks in the dog towns, and then they never brought it to New York at all—" "Opened cold, and then knocked 'em dead; it'll run longern' 'Lightnin'." She's a wonderful trouper, but she's no ingenue."

To Sally it was meaningless talk, but she enjoyed hearing it, nevertheless. A long cue of people stretched through the lobby of the Metropolitan. Its marble bust of Caruso looked down on them calmly. They were season tickets holders who had come for the little bundles of cardboard strips that would admit them once a week all through the winter and early spring to the magic world of song.

Sally felt a thrill of sudden interest as she went into the dark, rather cold auditorium. She had always seen it brilliantly lighted, filled with beautifully gowned women, the air warm, faintly perfumed, alive with rustling talk, or darkened so that one's attention was focussed on the stage. She had been there on great occasions—had seen Jeritza's American debut, Caruso's last performance, Farrar's farewell, after which the street outside was so crowded for half an hour with cheering enthusiasts that traffic was stopped. She had been among them—had seen the vivid, black haired woman, in her "Carmen" costume, greet the men and women who forgot restraint in applauding her.

And now she was to see it in new guise—she was thrilled at the thought.

JUNE BRIDE'S DECLARE SOVEREIGNTY BY HEADGEAR.

What's new for June brides is a timely subject. Well, coiffures for one thing. The young brides of today insist on diadems of orange blossoms, not a mere fillet of flowers. Sort of by-way of declaring their sovereignty beforehand, no doubt.

The Involuntary Vamp

by Mildred Barbour

Who's Who in the Story.

Diana Langley, who possessed to a superior degree a quality of "lure" which was wished for her at her birth by her youthful aunt,

Marjorie Langley, herself a notable beauty, to whom

Stephen Dale, a wealthy bachelor, had been devoted for years. On her twentieth birthday, Diana impetiously declared her love for Dale, and flung herself into his arms. Later she overheard

Sylvia Bennett, a friend who had witnessed the episode, telling

Ted Saunders, beloved by Sylvia but crazy over Diana. Mortified, Diana hastily accepted

Alex Leigh, a young navy officer, a guest at the same party.

The following morning Diana invited Sylvia and Ted to motor to New York with her and Alex as witnesses to their marriage.

After seeing Diana and Alex married, Sylvia and Ted followed their example.

CHAPTER IX.
An Unexpected Encounter.

"Where to now?" asked Ted Saunders as he handed his bride into the car beside Diana.

"Luncheon," suggested Diana; "I find that getting married gives one a ravenous appetite. How about the Ritz?"

"Right-o!"

Ted turned the car into the avenue. Alex Leigh reached back from the front seat and pressed Diana's hand that lay listlessly in her lap.

"Sweetheart!" he murmured, looking at her glad eyes.

Diana struggled to return the glance, and he was too submerged in his own happiness to note any lack of response in his bride.

Try as she would, Diana could not focus her thoughts on the serious business through which she had just passed. Nor had she yet come to a full appreciation of her own responsibility in the matter of the marriage of Sylvia and Ted. Later she knew she must recognize and deplore the circumstances which had brought about such a catastrophe.

Almost as though she were incapable of thought, Diana's eyes followed the avenue traffic; noted the Rolls-Royce and its smartly gowned occupant seated amid mauve cushions with the perfume of valley lilies rising from cut-glass holders that drew up alongside a Ford frankly filled with a short-waisted woman and a box containing live chickens; appraised the summer shoppers who drifted listlessly among the sidewalks; took on a flicker of interest at a window display of voilet evening gowns with wraps of ermine and sable.

Sylvia, in her corner of her car, was awedly silent. She wore an expression which was a mixture of dazed incredulity and seraphic happiness.

Ted talked jerkily and not entirely coherently to Alex Leigh, who laughed a great deal about nothing in particular.

"We'll meet you in the Crystal room when we've renovated our complexions," Diana told them as they descended from the car in front of the Ritz.

"I'm a total wreck," Sylvia confessed, when she and Diana were alone in the dressing room.

She eyed herself critically in the mirror and opened her vanity case.

"I can't fancy why Ted should want to marry a girl with a smudge on her nose. Likewise, my veil has rubbed off all my rouge."

Diana was applying powder to her piquant little nose. She had taken off her hat and the breeze from an electric fan lifted her coppery hair and whirled it about her face. She looked like a young nymph transplanted to a metropolitan dell.

"Isn't love popularly supposed to be blind? Otherwise, why would you marry Ted with that awful orange cravat of his?"

Sylvia put down her rouge puff and faced Diana squarely through the mirror.

"I'm crazy about Ted! I've always been! But I was too proud to let anyone know, naturally."

Diana concealed a smile and drew a crimson lipstick across her mouth. The state of Sylvia's heart where Ted was concerned had been common knowledge for some time.

"But, of course, you know he loved you?" Diana murmured, wiping away the superfluous rouge with the end of her little finger.

Sylvia shook her head. She was too dazed by her unexpected happiness to be discreet.

"I thought he was wild about you," she confessed.

"Nonsense!" denied Diana vigorously. "Ted and I are only good pals. We've known each other ever since we were born. You can't be sentimental about people you've had the measles with."

Sylvia drew a relieved breath.

"I am going to make him a good wife," she said soberly.

Diana laughed and put away her beauty outfit.

"Don't let the solemnity of the occasion lure you into making rash promises! Girls like us never make good wives; we're too restless and selfish and spoiled. Come, let's go find the men! I'm famished!

"By the way, if we get through in time," she continued as they crossed the lobby to the door of the crystal room, "I want to stop at that shop along the avenue where they're showing the new French evening gowns."

"How can you think at this time?" demanded Sylvia virtuously; "I'm too uplifted."

Diana laughed and followed the captain to the corner table where Ted and Alex Leigh rose at her approach.

But the laugh froze on her lips as her eyes went past the table where her young husband stood and encountered the surprised gaze of Stephen Dale, lunching tete-a-tete with Marjorie Langley.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

A Clothes Sprinkler.

Try dipping a small whisk into a pan of warm water and shaking it over the clothes. You will find it will sprinkle evenly and rapidly.

Canned Foods.

Empty canned foods before cooking and heat the contents in a double boiler. Even though placed in water, the can often contains enough liquid to cause sufficient steam for an explosion.

Housecleaning Time.

A stick with a notch in the end will be found a great help in taking pictures from the walls. The picture wire slips right into the notch and saves the necessity of a person's climbing up and down.

Two Uses for Water Ice.

A spoonful of orange water ice in each sherbert of fruit cup is a delicious addition. The next time you make home-made punch add a quart of lemon or orange ice just before serving and see if your drink is not a success

To Protect the Hands.

When doing any painting or cleaning around the house the hands may be protected by moistening common soap and working it into the pores, around the cuticle, and under the fingernails. After the job is finished, the hands can be easily cleansed.

WHAT'S WHAT

By Helen Decie

Perhaps it is not within the scope of this department to insist that engagements of marriage should not be entered into without serious consideration, nor broken without serious cause. But, when the solemn promise is recalled, there is a definite line of conduct by which even these minor tragedies—or comedies?—of life are regulated for the greater ease of all concerned.

So, when an announced engagement has been broken it is proper for the girl to write a courteous note to her ex-fiance, asking him to return her letters and photographs. She returns the engagement ring and any other gifts of intrinsic value which he may have made. His letters are also sent back without written explanation. The girl's mother should not send a notice to the paper. It is quite enough to make the announcement to friends without explaining the cause of the broken engagement.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

Sometimes when I look upon some woman who talks joud, boasts of her success, and flaunts her good looks, I find myself making another picture of her, seeing her as she might be, unpopular, an object of hostile instead of friendly curiosity. I ask myself: "If this woman were disgraced, either through her own act of because she was involved in another's downfall, how would she bear it?" It is said that prosperity is harder to bear than failure, but this can hardly apply to disgrace.

We can all be so involved; a husband, a son, a daughter may be so compromised that we feel hostility everywhere. One method of resistance is bad: to assume an air of defiance, to become aggressive, to hit other people before they hit you, for fear that they will hit you. That attitude turns pity into hatred; it causes disgrace to cling. Equally foolish is the behavior of the broken reed; a pale face, a mouth that can no longer smile, this serves the hostile as a justification and suggests that the innocent one is not assured of her innocence. If we come up against disgrace, there is only one cure to let it be seen that we are untouched, that our head "is bloody but unbowed.' To go on with the daily task, to accept one's desire of the burden, to refuse association by excuses with one who erred, to refuse still more the advertisement of virtue by joining in the chorus against one that was dear to us, there lies the only way. We are what we are, and disgrace can not touch us so long as we are content to be and are careless of what is thought.

DRESS

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Color and Glory of Ornamentation Have Crept Into the Jumper Blouse as the English Term the Over Blouse That Is Trying to Supercede Our Tuck-In Shirtwaist, Which Proves That the Garment Is to Be Tried Out as Something for the Formal Occasion as Well as for Sport.

Women may be indifferent to the "song of the shirt" in winter, but when spring arrives they listen. If they decide on a suit to greet the warm weather, they know it means endless blouses. If they decide that a separate skirt is an admirable purchase, they realize that the shirtwaist or jumper must be deepnded upon to furnish the variety to a costume that goes on every day.

This spring the popularity of the jumper makes the separate skirt a wise purchase. It relieves one of the tiresome blouse and sweater addition to the costume. The jumper is a simple way out of the difficulty of hiding one's waistline, one's skirt band. Why we have both when we spend our waking hours trying to conceal them is a question for the sphinx. But why have ears when they are never seen? "To hear," answer women. "But you never listen," say men.

They are the lazy woman's delight, these jumpers. Opaque, they do not reveal to the searching glance, discrepancies in the undergarment; they make no demand of perfection from the skirt belt, as it may hang low or fit high; they have no buttons and buttonholes, no hooks and eyes, nor snaps. One lifts the arms, the shirt slips over, the deed is done. Surely that is the ultimate economy of time, if one must dress at all.

Europe has been building up these fashions in jumpers while we have continued the sweater and the white waist, or worn the beaded transparent georgette crepe blouse tied with a string around the middle. Therefore, we, in our present amiable frame of mind toward these newer garments, find a generous assortment for our picking and choosing. To us the world seems full of different designs in them. The truth is they have been constantly worn for over a year abroad by all the smartly-dressed Europeans and we are getting the old and the new mixed. They are all good.

They are in coarse knitted fabric, in machine knitting, in crepe de chine, colored and white, in coarse linen with bright embroidery. The sketch shows one of the new French kinds which indicates that they are being launched into a more formal sphere of dressing than they are accustomed to find themselves in. The fabric is yellow crepe with silver embroidery and openwork combined. The curious touch lies in the embroidery. It contains little tabs that are fastened back like envelope flaps.

Well, one should not be astonished at whatever the fantasy-makers do, a designer who could make paper clothes popular and in good standing on a velvet gown can go far and the public will follow.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse

TIME FOR FRUIT.

In many American households the only time of the day when fresh fruit appears on the table is at breakfast. If you do not wish to eat it as a first course of breakfast you may go through the day without eating any fruit, unless you depart from the usage of the family in which you live. Now many persons find that cold fresh fruit is not very pleasant as a start off for breakfast. Other things seem more tempting. But at other times of the day fruit is not offered.

Many Europeans serve fruit as the last course for luncheon and dinner and in an elaborate dinner service in this country fruit is very often served as part of the last course. For practical purposes nothing can be better than fruit as a final course for dinner—in place of, not in addition to the dessert. Sheer laziness apparently accounts for the unwillingness of some persons to eat fruit for dessert at luncheon or dinner. But if you once get in the habit of eating fruit at this time it is something that you do not dislike to do. If finger bowls are served after the fruit course there is no reason why you should object to it on the score of the difficulty of handling it.

Fruit is one of the few things that can be eaten by almost every one as an occasional between meal without any bad effect. If you find yourself craving to eat something in the middle of the morning, take time to eat an orange, an apple, a few berries in season, a pear or some cherries.

We sometimes lose sight of the fact that fruit is infinitely more valuable for us when it is very fresh. We are apt to think that if fruit does not show signs of actual decay it is as good as fruit can be. It should be fresher than that. If possible one should eat fruit very soon after it has been exposed for sale. Farmers have the privilege of eating fruit right from the trees or vines that it is grown upon. Fruit eaten in this way doubtless has something to do with the good health and long life of farming folk so often enjoy.

A Club Woman's Views on Hollywood

Mrs. Sharp, investigating the private activities of the film stars, finds that the majority are just like other home folks.

Snub Pollard and Harold Lloyd, two leading film comedians living at Hollywood.

This is the second of a series of articles on Hollywood written by Mrs. Charles J. Sharp, a leading club woman of Alabama, who went to the famous film colony to ascertain the truth about conditions there.

Much has been said both for and against life at Hollywood. Mrs. Sharp has promised to tell just what she found there.—Editor's Note.

BY MRS. CHARLES J. SHARP.

When one of my dear relatives heard that I had gone to Hollywood, she began crying, "Stop her. Bring her back! We will never see her in life again."

I met an Englishman who confided: "They are all a bloody rum lot; not a decent one in the lot, except William D. Taylor, who was an Englishman and was buried in his majesty's uniform." He knew all about it, yet he hadn't one single fact, had never been near a studio and did not know a single producer or actor.

When men met my husband and said, "I am sorry Mrs. Sharp is going to investigate the movies; they are a vile lot; decent people should not even go to see them." I will confess I was perturbed, if not afraid.

Now this is honestly what I found in the Hal Roach, the Ince, the Goldwyn and the Lasky studios:

Never have I met a more gentlemanly set of men. Never have I had greater courtesy shown me. They did not know that I was coming. No stage was set for my benefit.

The Hal Roach studios make only comedies and Harold Lloyd is their leading star.

Southern Hospitality.

After giving my newspaper introductions to the Roach publicity man, Joseph Reddy, I was accorded such hospitality as I had never dreamed of. Mr. Reddy is young, enthusiastic and efficient. After his naval service during the war, he came home and married a girl from Saluda, Va. They have an attractive little home in which I found the hospitable atmosphere of Virginia itself.

Mr. Reddy took me into meet Dad and Mother Roach, who live in the studio and are indeed a mother and father to Hal's big family. Dad Roach, as he is lovingly called, is his son's treasurer.

He helped to survey Anniston, and during this work often came to Birmingham.

The two big directors are Jim and Charley Parrott. They are from Baltimore, and Charley said, "Please remember we have always lived on the southern side of the street." Then there was Red Golden, smiling at me just as he does in the pictures. Red is from Georgia. When he had finished showing me the interesting menagerie, I asked, "Where are you from?" He said, "Savanny, Georgy."

Later I remarked to Dad Roach's chauffeur, who was driving me home: "It seems as if you had a bunch of southern fellows out here." "Yes, ma'am, south is spoke here about as much as anything else."

Snub Pollard was making his first two-reel comedy, "Grandpa's Money." Mr. Pollard has just married Miss Elizabeth Bowen, of Lexington, Ky. Mrs. Pollard takes no part in making pictures, but I saw a great deal of her, as they live next door to the home in which I was visiting. When I met Snub he was sitting in the sun day-dreaming. He admitted he was trying to divide his income so as to have a remainder sufficient to buy the parlor curtains. His leading lady, Marie Mosquin, has acted in comedies with him for seven years. He said, "I have made all kinds of love to Marie, but she is just my little sister. My wife and I would protect Marie to the last ditch."

We then went over to the building where Harold Lloyd was making a scream of a picture. Harold Lloyd is young, good looking and apparently unspoiled by success. He is a Nebraskan. He has assisted Frank Bacon on the stage. When I asked him what diversion he cared most for, he quickly replied, "Seeing the other fellow act." He is the greatest of movie fans.

Lloyd Family Reunion.

Auction bridge, dinner and dancing at the Ambassador hotel, where I saw him with a party of friends, seemed to prove rather attractive to him. He is a bachelor and lives with his relatives. When he found I was such a hot southerner, he gave me a most attractive picture of himself in a confederate uniform.

The following quoted from a Los Angeles paper may be of interest: "Mrs. Sara Fraser, Denver, Colo., 88 years old, and grandmother of Harold Lloyd, arrived in Los Angeles last week, where a reunion of the Lloyd family was held in her honor."

Harold loves music and has several of the finest musical instruments in his home that money can purchase. Wouldn't you trust a man who loves music and his grandmother?

I like every person I met at the Roach studios, including "Sunshine Sammy," the little negro, who played so well in "Penrod." Sammy's people are from New Orleans, and if they can stand affluence they will soon be comfortably fixed.

Mr. Reddy told me that salaries have been cut from $600 and $400 per week to $7.50 per day. Pauline Frederick was drawing $6,500 per week. After the cut she has refused to sign contracts and is now in Chicago planning her return to the stage. May Allison has refused to sign her new contracts, as is the case with many of the actors and actresses.

Upon phoning May Allison I was told that she and her new husband, Bob Nelson, were on a motor trip. It is said that she is in love with her husband and does not care which way the picture wind blows.

The motion picture is cruel and relentless. It reads all camouflage and concealment. It exposes the slightest defects of body or soul. There is a very trite, but very true, saying in the studios that "You can't fool the camera."

The slightest trace of weariness, inward sorrow or physical dissipation shows with terrific and pitiless clarity.

Shooting at 7 A. M.

Some directors like D. W. Griffith refuse to photograph a girl who has been out the night before—even at a perfectly respectable and innocent dance. The weariness that the girl may not even feel is apparent to the camera.

Also remember thatt he heavy cost of production makes it necessary for directors to make use of every daylight hour. A company usually begins "shooting" at 9 o'clock in the morning, which necessitates being at the studio at least a half an hour earlier. No girl who has to get up from her downy couch at 7 a. m. is going to indulge in very many of the all-night parties written of in the fake stories sent out about Hollywood.

The truth is, nearly 50,000 people in Los Angeles touch the motion pictures at one point or another. There are hundreds of stenographers, telephone girls, wardrobe women, dressmakers, artisans, chauffeurs and laborers who are employed at the studios.

In the Mexican quarter of Los Angeles there are whole streets in which every resident works in the pictures, doing "extra" parts. There are times when the employment offices are fairly turned inside out to supply the needs of some special picture.

In their strain for picturesqueness irresponsible newspaper men find "a beautiful movie girl" in every woman who has worked even one day at a studio typewriter, and has fallen foul of some news event—even though it may be years after her brief employment.

Also, just as foolish boys and girls do the world over, many persons claim to be in motion pictures, who, in real fact, have never seen the inside of a studio; or who at best may have taken part in only a mob scene.

The motion picture colony, on account of its great size is, in effect, a city in which there are all classes of occupation, all varieties of temperament and all kinds of people.

Finds Family Life.

Those who can be fairly and justly referred to as "motion picture people"—those who actually make the pictures—present rather an exceptionally high standard of decent private lives.

To become a motion picture star involves self-denial, persistence in the face of the bitterest discouragement, robust health and good plain common sense. It would be next to impossible for any such girl as yellow journalists conjure up to attain and hold a position of importance in pictures of the studios I visited in California.

There is nothing really to damage the home life in the motion picture profession if it is rightly engaged in. There have been instances, and a number of them, where the fabric of this home life has been destroyed, but they are not typical of that larger and better class of players.

(Another installment of Mrs. Sharp's series on Hollywood will appear in an early issue.)

Henning—Edwards.

Miss Lula Henning, of Leesburg, Ala., and H. E. Edwards, of Atlanta, were married Saturday evening, May 6, by Dr. Henry Alford Porter at his home in Ansley Park. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will make their home on Rosedale road.

In an Old-Fashioned Garden

The following is one of a series of articles written by Mrs. E. P. Crenshaw, of College Park, one of the best known flower growers of the south. Mrs. Crenshaw has won many blue ribbons for her flowers at flower shows and state fairs.

Many subjects of interest to flower lovers of the south will be covered by Mrs. Crenshaw in her series. She will gladly answer any question in regard to flowers mailed to her direct in College Park, providing a stamped addressed envelope is enclosed for reply.

SECOND CHAPTER ON BLUE RIBBON
CHRYSANTHEMUMS.
BY MRS. E. P. CRENSHAW.

Chrysanthemums should be planted some time during the month of April in our southern climate. The very hot sun later in the season causes the plants to drop and die unless well shaded and watered.

If soil is very poor broadcast some well rotted manure on it and then plow or spade very deep, say 6 or 8 inches deep—the deeper the better.

Lay off rows 4 feet apart and put plants 3 feet apart in the rows.

Fine results have been obtained by putting some manure in furrows and then bedding on it as the farmers say.

No more manure or commercial fertilizer must be used until last of June or first of July. Too much fertilizer makes the plant go to "bush."

Tillage is all the manure necessary for the first two months and all this tillage must be done between the rows of plants. The roots of this plant grow very near the surface, therefore only loosen the soil near the plants. A small rake can be used for this purpose.

About the first of July put manure between rows and be sure it is not too near the plant; water should be applied in the furrows between rows.

Plants can be topped before planting, or if you prefer this can be done after the plants have a good start at growing. This topping makes the plant branch out. A plant will usually send out from three to five branches. Leave them on the plant, for by so doing you will have a bloom at the end of each branch or limb.

These limbs must be tied to a stake when they are about one foot high. You can use the common laths from the lumber yard as stakes.

Plow or spade between rows every ten days and put manure between rows every two weeks.

Be sure and change fertilizer for chrysanthemums do not like the same diet all the time. One time use cow manure, the next time use the droppings from the poultry yard, then use sheep manure and also use some sulphate of ammonia.

When small buds begin to form commence liquid manure between rows. I make this liquid out of all the fertilizers I have previously used. Mix them all together in a tub and use every week or twice a week is better.

Now when the flower buds begin to form is the time to get real busy, for they form very fast and plenty of them. They form in what we call "crown buds" and in clusters called "terminals." The crown buds come earlier and the terminals later in the season.

The crown bud is a bud standing alone and a terminal is a cluster of buds. The middle bud in this cluster is the right one to leave for the bloom of some varieties. I have found that most yellows grow a larger bloom from crown buds, while the pink varieties will grow a better bloom from a terminal bud. These rules are only generally speaking, for, as I have said, each variety often wants "individual" treatment when it comes to taking a flower bud.

All buds forming in June should be pinched off because they are false buds and form a very imperfect flower and sometimes produce nothing at all.

Chrysanthemum growers should experiment with disbudding. On the same plant leave a crown bud and a terminal bud and in this way they can prove the best bud to leave for the flower. Actual experience is the thing needed. Keep a record of your work, for memory is a fickle thing to rely on when it comes to disbudding a chrysanthemum.

McDowell—Green

Miss Lucile McDowell and P. B. Green were quietly married Sunday, May 7, in the presence of a few friends, by Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the Second Baptist church, at his home in Ansley Park. Mr. and Mrs. Green will make their home in Atlanta.

Mrs. Meegan Is Honored With Bridge-Tea

Mrs. James F. Meegan, of Washington, D. C., the guest of her sister, Miss Annie Flynn, was guest of honor at a bridge-tea given for her Monday afternoon by Miss Flynn at the Piedmont Driving club.

The tea table had as centerpiece a low bowl of Paul Neyron roses, with smaller vases of other pink roses. The pink tapers in silver candlesticks were unshaded.

The first prize was a Venetian glass fruit dish. The guest prize was a Venetian glass vase, and the consolation was a piece of lingerie. The consolation for those not playing was a handpainted basket.

Mrs. Meegan was gowned in periwinkle Canton crepe, and Miss Flynn's costume was of blue beaded georgette.

Invited to meet Mrs. Meegan were the members of Miss Flynn's card club and a few intimate friends of Mrs. Meegan's.

Peachtree Road Club Meeting Is Postponed.

Mrs. Archibald Davis Presides Over Y. W. Directors' Meeting

Mrs. Archibald Davis, president of the Y. W. C. A., presided over the meeting of the board of directors, which was held at headquarters on Monday, with an all-day session.

Mrs. Davis told of the national convention of the Young Women's Christian association that was held in Hot Springs, Ark., from April 20 to 27. Mrs. Davis and Miss Irma E. Finley, Y. W. C. A. general secretary, gave the details of the questions of national importance that were brought before the convention.

Millinery Classes.

Mrs. A. R. Colcord, newly elected chairman of education, announced that the success of the Y. W. millinery classes that have been operated by the Smith-Hughes fund, with an attendance of sixty girls, has convinced her committee that Atlanta's employed girls are interested in economics, especially cooking, millinery and dressmaking. Mrs. Colcord, with her committee, Mrs. A. P. Coles, Mrs. Russell Bridges and Mrs. W. F. Melton, have begun to work out plans for organizing classes that will meet the girls' requests.

Mrs. Charles A. Conklin, chairman of the summer camp at Highland, Ga., announced the formal opening May 27. The chairman stated that while the new swimming pool is of chiefest interest to the girls, other improvements have been made for their comfort, including a pumping station and a drinking fountain.

Other points of interest brought out at the meeting were that under the chairmanship of Mrs. W. P. Anderson the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria is to be redecorated; that Mrs. Davis, president, is to again represent the association in its Chamber of Commerce membership for 1921.

Department Reports.

The employmeht bureau reported that thirty-nine girls had been placed in permanent positions during the past two weeks and in the room registry department twenty-four applicants had been placed in suitable living places in this city; thirty-one girls and women joined the Y. W. C. A. during the month of April with five sustaining members. The girl reserve department had forty club activities for the 350 girl reserves, and in the industrial department the great interest centered upon the regular club work and in the recent cake sale and carnival the girls gave to make money to send their delegates to the South Atlantic States Y. W. C. A. Industrial conference, to be held this summer at Lake Junaluska, N. C.

Those present at the meeting were: Mrs. Davis, president; Mrs. Emily C. McDougald, Mrs. Charles Conklin, Mrs. A. R. Colcord, Mrs. E. C. Kontz, Mrs. F. M. Robinson, Mrs. W. P. Anderson, Mrs. A. W. Richards, Miss Blanche Holbrook, Mrs. D. I. Carson, Miss Mabel Magruder, Mrs. Clayton Callaway, Miss Irma E. Finley, Miss Mary Mendenhall, Miss Sally E. Brown, Mrs. Plato Durham, Mrs. W. R. Prescott and Mrs. J. P. Averill.

The depressing effect of the injury of Mrs. F. M. Inman was felt at the meeting. Mrs. Inman, who was injured Saturday in an automobile accident at Rutledge, Ga., is a member of the Y. W. C. A. board of trustees and is co-chairman with Mrs. Charles Conklin, of the Y. W. C. A. camp, at Highland, Ga.

DELAY IN MEETING OF STATE COMMITTEE

Vice Chairman James J. Flynt, of Griffin, of the democratic state executive committee, who was in Atlanta Tuesday on a business trip, declared there would probably be a delay in committee's next meeting, which was scheduled for this week to draft regulations for the state primary, September 13. Mr. Flynt asserted that he had received no information of a call for the meeting, and that it would probably be held the latter part of this month.

Children Rehearsing Daily For Big Pageant Saturday

Miss Nellie Sullivan, who will take the part of the queen of the fairies in the children's pageant.

An exquisite Alice blue curtain or eye is being made by Virgil Shepherd, decorator, for the pageant, "The Call of Spring," which the children's division of the Atlanta Woman's club will present Saturday afternon at the culb theater at 2:30 o'clock. This curtain will circle the entire stage and is made of lustrous satin. Following the performance it will be presented to the club by the children's division to become a part of the permanent stage equipment.

Rehearsals are being held every day for this pageant, which promises to be the most artistic children's performance yet staged in Atlanta. Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson is directing the staging, lighting effects and dramatic features, while the ensemble dancing is in charge of Mrs. Harvey L. Parry, former director of physical culture at Agnes Scott college. Mrs. Jackson is also the author of the pageant which is taken from one of Louise M. Alcott's fairy fables.

The music, which is of the highest type and includes the best numbers by such composers as Beethoven, Mozart and Debussy, will be under the direction of William F. Chase. Mr. Chase is first violinist at the Metropolitan theater and has been a leader in orchestra work for a great many years. He is a splendid musician, and the orchestra which he has assembled to play the accompaniments and special musical numbers at this performance is composed of picked musicians from the best orchestras in the city.

In addition the leading pupils of the most successful teachers of interpretative and classical dancing in the city will take part in the performance. Nellie Sullivan, a former pupil of Mrs William Claer Spiker, and a teacher herself at the present time, will portray the role of Queen of the fairies. Miss Sullivan will wear a marvelous costume of real lace, satin and sequin. Irene Shepherdson, the Frost King, will also wear an exquisite costume. Her cape is a distinct work of art in itself and was ordered from New York. Miss Shepherdson, with her straight, boyish figure and short brown hair, makes an ideal king. She is the leader of the Woman's Club Girl Scout Troop No. 6.

Patricia Sanders, who has been a leading figure in dancing circles in the very young set and who has taken conspicuous roles in a number of pageants and other affairs, has the role of "Beauty" in "The Call of Spring." Patricia has studied with the best teachers in the south, and plans to do professional work.

Another well-known dancer is Freda Sullivan, the sister of Nellie Sullivan, who will take the part of "Will-o'-the-Wisp." Freda is a lovely little dancer who has appeared at the Howard theater on a number of occasions and has been trained by her sister.

Other girls who have leading parts are Virginia Turman, as the Spirit of Spring; Dorothy Keeling, as Violet; Thelma Chalman, as Love, and Lois Spies, as Bee.

In the group of boys Samuel Clark as a page to the king, does some very splendid work. Samuel has danced with Patricia Saunders a number of times, and, like her, is destined for a professional career.

Tickets are on sale at Goodhart-Tompkins and at the Atlanta Woman's club. Admission for adults 75 cents; children 50 cents.

On Thursday Mrs. Madison Brooks will entertain at a bridge-luncheon at her home.

Covers were laid for Mrs. Meegan, Miss Flynn, Miss Katherine Lovett, Miss Margaret Doonan, Mr. Terrance Doonan and Mr. and Mrs. Otis.

Things for Boys to Make.

No. 93—On-ca-po Bird.

Materials needed: Two young (cooked) onions, a carrot, a potato and two raisins. A piece of match for neck, two pins for holding raisins in place and two shingle nails.

The head is made of the carrot and the raisins form the eyes. Onion tops are placed in slits in the potato to form wings and tail. The onions are inserted into holes in the potato to form feet and legs. The longer the legs the funnier will the On-ca-po bird look. If onions are too weak to bear the weight push small sticks up through them to make them stiffer. To make the bird stand, place him on a piece of heavy pasteboard and push shingle nails up through from the bottom of this into the feet. Small diagram shows this with nail head sunked into pasteboard.

Lupton Hall at Oglethorpe To Have Memorable Opening

A great event in the history of Oglethorpe university will be the formal opening of Lupton Hall, which will take place May 27, when this beautiful building, the second of the permanent buildings of Oglethorpe university, will be thrown open for inspection by the friends and founders of the university.

This beautiful building, perhaps the finest speciment of collegiate gothic in sixteen southern states, is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga. Mr. Lupton is the first vice president of the university and has been deeply interested in the progress of his institution since its founding. His first gift of $10,000 cash was made following an appeal for assistance in the First Presbyterian church, of Chattanooga. His interest deepened with each passing year until he finally gave this beautiful new structure.

It is erected in memory of his mother. On the corner stone is the following inscription:

"In memoriam Matris Erexit Lupton. June 30, 1920."

The opening of the new building will be one of the most interesting social events of the year in Atlanta. The reception will be given under the auspices of the woman's board of the university, and the friends of the university are invited to come and meet Mr. and Mrs. Lupton. Other notable guests are expected. As the housewarming falls on the evening preceding the commencement exercises, the speakers of the occasion and honor guests are all expecting to be present.

The opening of Lupton hall will add greatly to the facilities of the university. In the basement will be a stack room for the library and a printery and bindery, the home for the Oglethorpe press, where specially trained students will do the printing work of the institution. On the first floor the library is located and the founder's room, set apart as sacred to the memory of the founder of the Oglethorpe university. The second floor comprises a chapel and university office. The third floor is devoted to classroom space and the chime room. In the tower are the clock and chimes.

The opening of this building will make the second great milestone in the progress of Oglethorpe.

Now is the time to can PINEAPPLES at home

Fresh pineapples are now abundant and low-priced.

Shipments of delicious, fragrant, sugar-sweet fruit are arriving every day from Cuba where the choicest pineapples are grown.

Can a few now for use in the season when you can't get the fresh fruit.

Here is a simple recipe for home canning.

Slice, peel and core the fruit. Blanch for 5 minutes in boiling water, then cold dip. Place in a kettle, cover with syrup made with 3 cups sugar to 2 cups blanching water. Boil for 4 minutes. Fill cans with fruit, pour over enough juice to cover, then sterilize for 30 minutes in hot water bath and seal tightly while hot.

Ask your grocer for prices on pineapples. You should serve this glorious tropical fruit more often. It is healthful and delicious.

WEST INDIES FRUIT IMPORTING CO.

1 Grasp the pineapple firmly in one hand, then take hold of foliage with the other hand and twist it off.

2 Now slice the fruit across in thick slices not less than three-quarters of an inch thick.

3 Put a slice on a plate. Then run a sharp knife around the edge of the slice, inside the peel. It then comes off, with eyes, easily.

4 Cut across the slice as shown in diagram, four cuts, one on each side of the core. The core will be out without any waste.

What Are You Going To Do About It?

You are going to hear a whole lot within the next few days about Georgia-made products. The whole state is waking up to the fact that you can get just as good products right here at home—right at your elbow—as can be found anywhere.

This is exactly what we have been preaching for a long, long time.

You don't have to send away off yonder to get products, unless you want to pay for a foreign label, which doesn't add any special merit to the product.

Now, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to stand by home-made goods—stand up for home manufacturers, who employ thousands of our home people—or are you going to send your money away off somewhere where you'll never see it again or receive any special benefit from it?

Think about this—AND ACT!

Give the Georgia-made movement your support.

BITTERNESS IS UNBECOMING

Bitterness is unbecoming.

No woman would wear an unbecoming hat if she could avoid it.

No woman would put on a distinctly unbecoming gown or wear her hair in an unbecoming fashion if she could find a becoming one.

Yet, neither an unbecoming hat or gown, nor hair worn in an unbecoming fashion, can destroy a woman's charm more quickly and more utterly than the very unbecoming mood of bitterness.

I heard a woman telling the other day of a mean thing another woman had done to her and of her intention to get back at her.

A Bitter Mood Is Fatal.

It was a mean thing. Nobody could gainsay that. But even though one could understand the woman's resentment, that did not change the fact that she spoke about it, all the pleasant musical inflection went out of her voice and all the charm of expression that makes her face attractive was wiped out of it. In place of the sweet expression that usually lights up her countenance, there came mean, hard, little lines and a bitter expression. And oh, how plain and unlovely that woman did look!

Men, I think, are peculiarly sensitive to the change in a woman that a mood like this brings. A great deal has been said about the danger of losing a man's love if one gets into the habit of wearing unlovely negligees and of neglecting the little details that go to make up physical loveliness. I think it is quite as dangerous, quite as much of a shock to love, to let oneself be seen in a mean or bitter mood as with one's hair in curlers.

Jealousy Makes Wives Homely.

It is said that wives are usually flattered by their husband's jealousy, whereas husbands are almost always alienated by a frequent show of jealousy on the part of the wife. I think one reason is that the jealous mood is a bittter mood and therefore takes away sweetness and charm from the wife's face and puts mean and ugly lines in its stead. The very jealousy which makes her temporarily into a woman whom it is less easy for him to reassure of his love because she is so much less lovely and lovable than when she is normal.

Of course you may ask if jealousy does not do the same thing to man. To a certain extent it does (not altogether, I think, for man's reaction is not quite the same), but sweetness and charm are not among the chief stock in trade for men in the love barter with the other sex. And whether it should be so or not, they are for women.

The Cynic Not a Charmer.

Bitterness, resentment, cynicism, are not as destructive to the qualities in a man that charm women as to those in a woman that charm men.

A cynical man is often quite popular with the other sex, a cynical woman seldom.

Perhaps it should not be so. Perhaps some day, when we have greater sex equality, it will not be so. I don't know.

But this I know. That if any woman who wants to be attractive could look in the glass during a bitter mood, she would not like the looks of herself, and would not want to look that way again.

When Hungry Little Muscles Say, "Please Help Me"

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period through which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, but if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter."—Mrs. FANNIE ROSENSTEIN, 882 N. Holly Street, Phila., Pa.

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish this testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. LIVERNOIS, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week

The Heart of Canyon Pass

BY THOMAS K. HOLMES

Next Week, "The Spoilers of the Valley"
By Robert Watson.

The opportunities Betty had to be with Andy were not many. The rules of the hall were very strict. Even her introduction to the young man from the west had been clandestine. Unknown to Betty Wilkinson, learning all he could about certain girls in her set at the school, had selected Betty Hunt deliberately as his mark. Betty's school fees were paid by an old aunt who was reputed very rich. The aunt was known to be devoted to her. All that she had was sure to be Betty's when Aunt Prudence died. Wilkinson had even gone so far as to learn more particularly about the state of Aunt Prudence Mason's health than Betty knew herself. One item only escaped Andy Wilkenson's cunning mind. It was not until they had been married and Wilkenson was driving Betty back to the hall by unfrequented roads late in the afternoon that the small but appalling oversight on his part broke upon his understanding.

"You know, girlie, I haven't got much money. I came east here"—to get me a stake. I did a fool thing and threw away—just threw away—my hank roll out in Crescent City."

"Oh, money!" replied Betty with fine scorn. "You can go to work at something, Andy, and earn more."

"Ye-as," he agreed in a tone that might have revealed a good deal to a more sophisticated person than the girl who had so recently been Betty Hunt, "so I can. But I may not make any good connection before you get out of that school. I'm known out there. A man can always do better in his own stamping-grounds. This old aunt of yours is pretty well fixed, eh?"

The girl was startled. "Wealthy? I think so."

"She's pretty sick, isn't she?"

Betty told him that Aunt Prudence was feeble.

"Anyway," Wilkenson observed, after some thought, "you're her heir, Betty. W'd better keep all this quiet until auntie goes over the divide. No use stirring up possible objections. She'll leave you her money, you say. We'll take that money and go back west. I know a place I can buy in Crescent City that will pay big returns. I will let the pasteboards alone, myself. I always get foolish if I deal 'em wild instead of for the house. We'll cut a swath out there, Betty, that'll make 'em sit up and take notice. Sure thing!"

"Andy! What are you talking about?" asked the incredulous girl. "Auntie's money—it's all invested. I know it is. It's tied up."

"Shucks! we can untie it," and Wilkenson laughed.

"But, Andy," she said weakly, "I know all about auntie's will. I have even read it. Aunt Prudence gives me her property; but I can spend only the income from itu ntil I am 30."

'What s that?" His tone made her jump. "Thirty?" Then he thought. "Well, shucks, honey," he drawled, "you're a married woman now. That makes you practically of age in this state, and the courts"—

"It makes no difeernce, Andy. The will is made that way for that very purpose," the girl said frankly.

'For what purpose?"

'So that—that my husband cannot touch the principal. Until I am 30, I cannot touch it myself."

An oath—a foul, blistering expression—parted the man's lips. In the deepening gloom of the evening she could see his face change. In that dragging minute, in which Andy had stopped the car with a jerk, Betty understood everything about this westerner. And from that instant had germinated and grown all the hatred and fear of the west and its people that Betty Hunt had betrayed when first her brother had suggested the journey to Canyon Pass.

She had stepped out of the car. She had torn in small pieces the paper the old minister had given her. She had drawn from her finger the plain band Wilkenson had placed upon it, which she must have hidden in any case, and thrown it from her into the bushes beside the way. Then Betty Hunt had commanded Andrew Wilkenson never to speak to her again—never to try to see, write, or otherwise communicate with her. She walked away from him. She heard the roar of the engine after a moment and knew he turned the car and drove away. And that had been the end of Betty's romance. She had not seen the westerner again.

CHAPTER VII.
Murder Will Out.

During the ensuing weeks the cabaret singer went often to see Betty at the hotel. The two girls actually enjoyed each other's society. The friendship grew out of a hunger in the hearts of both Nell and Betty.

Nell never attended the services held in Tolley's old dance hall. But the people of the town in general came to accept the religious exercises as an institution and supported them fairly in point of contributions and attendance. There was yet, however, strong opposition to the parson and his work. Nell, soon after the beginning of her acquaintance with Betty, stopped singing "This Is No Place for a Minister's Son" and took up no other ditty aimed in any particular at the Rev. Willet Ford Hunt and his work.

Hunt supplemented the morning preaching with a Sunday school in the afternoon and a general service in the evening, at which he usually gave a helpful talk on more secular lines than his morning sermon. He would have been glad to have had more and better singing; but although Rosabel Pickett did her best, the song service was far from satisfactory. The parson never passed Colorado Brown's place in the evening and heard Nell's sweeet voice that he was not covetous. He would neevr be satisfied—but he whispered this not even to Betty—until he heard that voice leading his congregation in the meeting room.

It was now fall, a golden-and-red autumn, that foretold for the natives of Canyon Pass an early winter. To make this assurance doubly sure, old Steve Siebert and Andy McCann came wandering back to the pass weeks ahead of their scheduled time. Their activities had been at least a hundred miles apart. But both had seen signs—unmistakable signs—of approaching winter.

"You old duffers ain't right in your minds," said Judson to Andy McCann. "Just as loco as you can be. Ye never did make a strike and ye never will"—

"If you were yere twenty years ago"—

"You know derned well I was, Andy," put in Judson. "Reckon I was. And before."

"You remember the flood then?"

"I ain't lost my mem'ry," muttered Judson.

"All right. Keep that in yer mind," said Andy. "There was a discovery made that year that you—nor nobody else in Canyon Pass—knowed anything about. Talk about the mother lode! Well!"

"Is that so?" cried the storekeeper eagerly. "Then why wasn't it worked?" I knowed you and Steve brought in samples of the right stuff; but"—

"Steve," snarled McCann, his whole maner changing. "That derned rat? Him? He didn't have no more to do with findin' that vein—Huh! Huh!" He coughed, fell silent, went out of the store, deaf to any further questions.

There was no church meeting that evening.

"I wonder what kept Joe away?" Hunt ventured to Judson, as they, the last of the company, left the meeting room.

The old storekeeper turned to him and grinned. "Joe's mighty busy, I reckon," he said. "Just about once in so often oe seems to lose ev'ry mite of sense he was born with. He thinks he can beat the man that got the first patent out on stud poker."

"Ah! I know Joe used to like cards. Is it as bad as you intimate, Judson?"

"Some worse, I'm free to say," declared the old man. "Joe's been up against Colorado Brown's Miguel. coveral times lately. They get up a round game of a few fellers—all friends. But Miguel is always playin' for the house. He's a wizard—no mistake."

Hunt separated from the storekeeper and passed Colorado's place; then he turned back. He hesitated when he faced the swinging doors. It was not lack of courage that restrained Mr. Hunt from preaching a general revival and a bitter war against the cohorts of the devil in his town. Merely, the time was not ripe. But tonight he was impressed by the feeling that his friend needed him. Joe was slipping away from him. For some unexplained reason the very man who had brought him here to the pass and coaxed the idea of a spiritual uplift of the place into germination, was blacksliding. He pushed through the flaps of the door.

Brown himself came forward to shake hands with the parson. Some of the players at the green-covered tables noded to Hunt. The principal interest seemed to be about a corner table at which the parson saw Joe Hurley sitting. He went over to it. Hurley looked up, grinned and said: "Hullo, Willie! Want me?"

"I've something to ask you—by and by, when you are done."

"Looks like an all-night session," returned Hurley, immediately giving his attention to the cards again.

There was a sudden clamor at the door, the flaps swung in sharply, and several men entered. Smithy, Judson's gangling young clerk, was the most noticeable member of the new group. He had a cut over his right eye, a puff on his cheekbone that could have been made by nothing but a heavy fist, and when he spoke a crimson gap in his upper jaw betrayed the absence of two teeth.

"What's happened to you, Smithy?" demanded Colorado Brown, coming forward quickly. "Somebody punch you?"

"I'll say they did!" lisped Smithy. He was half sobbing, but he was mad clear through. "Up to Tolley's. I was just in there. I heard Tolley and Tom Hicks and some others of his gang talkin'. I could't help hearin' what was said, and when I went for 'em this—this is what I got."

"What did they say, Smith?" Joe Hurley asked.

"Why, the skunks!" cried Smithy, "they said Nell Blossom shot Dick the Devil last spring and flung him over the wall of the canyon into Runaway river."

With the quickness of a cat, Joe slipped through the crowd about the table and shot for the door. But the parson was at his elbow before he could get through the portal.

"You'd better keep out of this, Willie," Hurley said between his teeth. "There's goin' to be the devil to pay in a minute."

"It is as much my business as it is yours, Joe," said Hunt, in step with his long stride on the sidewalk where they headed toward the Grub Stake.

As Joe burst into the main entrance of the Grub Stake it did not take his trained glance to see that something had happened here, and more of the same kind was expected. Several of the gaming tables were empty. There was not a man standing in front of the bar. Hunt knew at first glance that some of the toughest men in the camp were gathered here—either about the remaining tables or with Boss Tolley at the office where the safes stood. That office, Joe had told the parson, was an arsenal. There was a bodyguard around the dive-keeper of at least six men. Joe Hurley saw that all this group was armed and primed for mischief.

Hunt had pushed ahead for the moment they stepped inside the door In a flash, before a word was spoken, Joe took two long strides sideways and got behind the first table, which was emtpy. And he, by this act, left Hunt out of the line of any bullet aimed by the gang standing at the end of the bar at himself. A gun had not yet been drawn, however, on either side. Nor had a word been spoken by either Tolley and his gang or by the two men who had entered so suddenly.

Sam Tubbs had been facing the door at a near-by stable. It was evident that Steven siebert, the returned desert rat, had been treating Tubbs to more liquor than was good for him. But Sam had some wit left. Joe's action forecast the popping of guns—instantly! Cam let his feet slide out from under him and passed out of sight under the table. Steve Siebert, however, did not even remove his pipe from his lips, but wheeled in his chair and glared from Joe to Tolley and his bodyguard. The old man swung a heavy, old-style six-gun low on his hip. But he did not touch it—then.

It was Joe Hurley who spoke first. "Toley!" he said fiercely but clearly, "I warned you what I'd do if you repeated that lie about the girl. Stand out from those bootlickers of yours and take your medicine."

The challenge got no response from Toley, but a grimace like that of a wolf in a trap.

"Wait a moment." The parson was approaching Tolley and his men down the long length of the bar. When he spoke, Tom Hicks half drew his gun.

"Mr. Tolley," Hunt said in the same clear but quiet voice, "will undoubtedly explain and apologize for what we understand he has said about the young woman in question. Come, now, Mr. Tolley! you are ready to take back your words, aren't you? You have no more proof, have you, of your—er—misstatement than you had several weeks ago, when you discussed the affair with Mr. Hurley in my hearing?"

"You derned buttinsky!" spat out Tolley vengefully. 'Mind what you are doing, or you'll stop lead."

"That will not make al ie the truth, Mr. Tolley," rejoined Hunt, now squarely between the group of desperadoes and Joe Hurley's position.

"You mean to say I'm a liar?" blustered Tolley.

"I mean to say that the story you have repeated about the young woman and the man you say has disappeared has no foundation in fact, and that you have in your possession no proof to back your statement. If that is calling you a liar, Mr. Tolley, then consider yourself so called!"

"Well! Look here, I reckon I know what I am talkin' about"—

"But you do not talk about what you know," interposed Hunt. "To my personal knowledge—and that of Mr. Hurley—the missing man was not buried under that heap of rubbish with his horse."

"Then he went into the river!" cried Tolley.

Here Joe Hurley put in a very pungent word: "And that might easily be true. If you found his horse and removed the saddle, you might have found the man, too, Tolley, and removed some of his harness. From the first I suspected you, Tolley. Your dust won't hide what you have done. In fact, you are too anxious to cast suspicion on another person. But your fears have made you try to invent a lie that doesn't work out just the way you expected it to."

"I'll show you"—.

"You'll show me nothing, Tolley!" retorted Hurley. "You'll listen—and these other gentlemen. You got the man's saddle. It is just as probable that you found his body, as well as that of the horse. And he was known to wear a money-belt around his waist. You confess that you rode after the man. And you confess that you got his saddle. Confess the rest of it, you dog. What else have you got in your safe that belonged to"—

Boss Tolley threw caution to the winds at this juncture. He flung himself forward with a howl of rage and whipped the gun from the holster at his hip.

"Get down, Willie!" shouted Hurley and flung the table on its edge with a crash, droping behind it.

An interruption—a voice as hoarse as the croak of voices! "Tolley! You other fellows! Put 'em up! H'ist 'em!"

Tolley halted—it seemed in midflight. Even the gun hand of Tom Hicks relaxed. From the other side of the room old Steve Siebert commanded the situation—and the group of desperate men. The black muzzle of his gun gaped like the mouth of a cannon. Hunt did not stand between him and Tolley's crowd. "H'ist 'em!" Steve said again, and as Tolley's gun clattered to the floor and Hicks thrust back his weapon into his sheath, he added: "I don't aim to mix in what ain't my business, as a usual thing. But when I see seven skunks going after two boys—an' one o' them a parson and not ironed a-tall—I reckon on taking a hand Put 'em up!"

The ruffians obeyed. Seven pairs of hands reached for the smoke-begrimmed ceiling. Several startled faces appeared under the archway between the barroom and the dance hall. One was the desert-bitten countenance of Andy McCan. Steve saw him. 'Andy, you derned old rat!" Steve cried. "shut that office door and lock it. Then, just frisk them rustlers and remove their irons."

McCann snarled at the other old pocket-hunter but he obeyed. "It takes us old sourdoughs to be slick," he chuckled, when he had dumped an armful of guns on an empty table.

"There ain't goin' to be no shootin'," said Steve Siebert. "Now, what's it all about? What's the row?"

It was the Reverent Willet Ford who took upon himself the explanation. "Mr. Tolley has made the statement that Mis Blossom made the cause of Beckworth's death. His horse went over the cliff into the canyon. Whether or not the man went with it"—

"He did!" cried Andy McCann, smiting his thigh resoundingly with his palm. "By gravy! Is that what's atin' all you fellers?"

"Say! Who's runnin' this court, I'd like to know?" demanded Steve Siebert angrily.

"Aw, shut up—you old lizard," said McCann, flaming at him. "'Tain't no court. Put up your gun. It's all off. Dick the Devil ain't dead at all."

"Just what do you mean?" Hunt asked.

"Why, we seen him—me and that old rat sittin' there wtih his gun. Sure! And me and him pulled Dick out of the river. He went clean over his horse's head and landed in the river—same's a bird. He might have been drowned if me and that ground owl there hadn't got him out. But he never said one word about Nell Blossom bein' with him or havin' anything to do with his comin' down that cliff. No, sir!"

"Nary a word," agreed Siebert.

"What—what became of him?" stammered Hunt, a great weight lifted from his heart.

"He went along with me to the edge of the the desert," said Siebert slowly. "He dried out at my fire that night. Next morning he lit out to hit the Lamberton trial. That's all I know about Dick."

It was Joe Hurley who had the last word. He set up the overturned table and walked over to the bar. "To show that theres' no hard feelings," he drawled, "this'll be on me. Get busy, Tolley, on the right side of this bar. And hereafter, you think twice before you say anything you're not dead sure of about Nell Blossom.

Prep Games Won by Hard Hitting; Tech Hi Wins From Boys' Hi 12-0

Marist Also Wins Game by Hitting in Eighth Inning—Murphy Hits Homer for Win.

BY ROY E. WHITE.

Tech High defeated Boys' High for the second time this season by the same score of 12 to 0 at Piedmont park Tuesday afternoon in the second round of the last half of the prep league baseball schedule.

The game was practically the same as the one early in the season, with the possible exception of the pitching. Boys' High used Jameson and he pitched a good prep game. He also let one run in, in the sixth inning, on a wild pitch. Tech High used Hammell in the box and he hurled an extra good game, holding Boys' High to four widely scattered hits and striking out eight batters. One of the hits for Boys' High was a three-base knock in the eighth inning, with only one man out, and then Hammell pitched himself out of a hole by striking the next two out.

Hitting Won Game.

As usual ,the hitting of the Tech High team spelled defeat for Boys' High. The total number of hits for Tech High was 13, and two of those were for extra bases. Weatherby, at second base for Tech High, got three hits out of five times at bat and walked once. His fielding was faultless. The fielding of Richardson at short was one of the features for Tech High. He handled seven chances, many of those very difficult, without a bobble. He also got a couple of safe hits.

Hammell pitched the full nine innings for the first time for Tech High, being taken out on former occasions on account of wildness. He had the Boys' High batters at his mercy during the larger part of the game. Several times Boys' High had men on second and third with only one man out, but Hammell tightened up and kept the would-be scorers away from the home station. He knocked in two runs in the second inning with a long single.

The work of Jameson and Nunnally was the best for Boys' High. Nunnally hit for three bases, but his mates lost a chance to score him by inability to hit in the pinches. Jameson also hit for a couple of bases, but was left stranded on the keystone bag. Tech High secured 13 hits, but many of those could have been converted into outs by good fielding. Nunnally in the field for Boys' High handled many chances without an error.

The score by innings: R. H. E.

MARIST WINS IN EIGHTH.

Marist won a hard fought game from G. M. A. Tuesday afternoon on the Marist campus by a terrific home run drive by Catcher Murphy in the last half of the ninth inning after two men were out. The final score was Marist 6, G. M. A. 5.

The new combination of fielders that Marist used in the game again proved very effective, and the pitching of Bradley was a feature. He started the season off with a loss, but after two weeks of practice he reached his stride, and now he has won a victory over Marist and held Tech High to a very close score.

Catcher Murphy, of the Marist team, won the game in the ninth inning after two men were out, with a long drive over the left field wall. Besides winning the game with his hitting, his work behind the bat was very effective. He is a newcomer in prep circles, but he has played a good game throughout the season. His hitting in the last three games has been a feature for Marist.

Hunt Weakens.

Marist scored only one run off Hunt up until the eighth, when a barrage of hits that scored four runs drove him to the bench. Smith relieved him and prevented further scoring, but grooved one too many in the ninth for Murphy that spelled defeat. Hunt seemed to be pitching a good game, allowing Marist only nine hits, but weakened considerably in the eighth, when Marist started a rally that tied the score.

G. M. A. started scoring off Marist in the very first inning, when three runs were put across the plate. One more was scored in the third and another in the fifth, but after that Bradley settled down and prevented any more scoring. Patton hit a home run in the first inning for G. M. A.

In many parts of continental Europe the idea has prevailed since the middle ages that the days dedicated to Saints Mamertus, Pancreas and Servatius—May 11, 12 and 13—or, according to another version, to Saints Pancras, Servatius and Boniface—May 12, 13 and 14—generally bring destructive frosts. On account of this belief, which has been the subject of much scientific discussion, both the saints in question and their days in the calendar are popularly known as the "ice saints."

S. I. A. A. MEET STARTS FRI.

BY WALTER SCHWAM.

Baton Rouge, La., May 9.—(Special.)—With entries already received from seven southern colleges and a number expected early this week, indications are that from twelve to fifteen colleges of the S. I. A. A. will be represented in the annual track and field championships of the association, to be held at Baton Rouge Friday and Saturday of this week, May 12-13. Sewanee and Kentucky sent their entries to Dr. D. O. Stroud, who is entry official, Saturday morning. Nicholson at Sewanee is entering a team of eight men, while the Blue Grass institution, though sending but six men, will compete in nine events of the total of fifteen. The famous Clare, who holds the association record in the high and low hurdles, will be entered in both the stick events, the two dashes and the broad jump.

Vols Entered.

The University of Tennessee, Millsaps college, the University of Florida, South Carolina, and, of course, Louisiana State university, have all sent in their entries. The Volunteer college is sending five men, the Millsaps Majors four high-class performers, while the duet of Provost and Waite from South Carolina and the six-man team from the Florida 'Gators complete the role of those already in. The L. S. U. Tigers will send in a full team, entries to be filed in each of the fifteen events.

Mississippi A. & M. in full force under Coach Chadwick, is expected to send in its entries early this week, and indications look good for the Maroons to send a complete outfit. Vanderbilt also is expected to enter a large squad, as is Georgia Tech, Clemson, Tulane, Auburn, Georgia, Alabama, and another Mississippi school should run the total of schools entered up to around twelve or fifteen.

DEMPSEY LEAVES PARIS AFTER SEVERAL DELAYS

Paris, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—After postponing his departure from Paris several times Jack Dempsey finally made up his mind to break away from the attractions of the French capital and leave for London this afternoon. He spent the morning shopping and returning the visits of friends. Among his purchases were several quarts of exotic perfumes.

"I'm glad it's all over," he said as he started to pack his trunk.

"I don't want to stay in London beyond Saturday," said Dempsey. "I must get back to the United States and start training to meet Willard and all other comers."

Asked who he thought would win the coming fight in London, the champion said he was a good friend of both Carpentier and Lewis and would like to see both make a good showing, but from a selfish standpoint he would prefer to see the Frenchman win, as a match with him would make a much better and more popular one for the titleholder.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "Carpentier is much the fitter man and ought to be able to walk away with the fight. If he does I will sign up with him immediately and meet him in London sometime during the winter."

CHURCHES TO PUSH COURTLAND PAVING

The project of re-paving and widening Courtland street into an eighty foot boulevard is heartily indorsed by churches on both Courtland street and Washington avenue, according to the announcement Tuesday of H. A. Alexander, chairman of the Courtland Street Improvement association.

The Second Baptist church, Washington and Mitchell streets, has already taken definite action in co-operating with the Courtland Street Improvement association to push the project to a successful conclusion, Dr. Henry Alfred Porter, pastor of the church, announced Tuesday. A committee consisting of Walter Brown, chairman; A. C. Briscoe, D. P. Darrington, W. F. George, E. L. Harling, and H. R. Todd was appointed to cooperate with the association in making plans for the improvement project and bringing them to the attention of city and county officials.

EAST POINT WANTS GAME FOR SATURDAY

The East Point ball team is looking for trouble for Saturday in the way of baseball games. Any team that feels that they are in need of a little action from this organization can communicate with T. D. Owens at East Point.

AN OFFER of 15,000 pounds was made Benny Leonard for a 20-round match with Ted Lewis in case Lewis wins or draws in his match with Carpentier. This fight would be staged in London about the end of June. The offer was cabled to Billy Gibson, Leonard's manager, by George McDonald.

WESTERN CONTENDERS in the major leagues drew first blood in their initial series staged in the east. The Yanks and the Giants were the only eastern clubs that kept the westerners from making a clean sweep in the opening games.

THE FIRST of the many "critical series" that will be staged this year in the many leagues that are now in session is now being staged between the Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals. By sweeping the series the Cards can tie New York for the league leadership, providing the Cubs now resting in second place falter in one game with Philadelphia.

THE UNITED STATES will have at least two representatives in the British women's golf championship that starts on Monday at Sandwich, according to word received from England. Mrs. W. A. Gavin and Mrs. A. Arnold Jackson have entered the event according to cabled advices. Mrs. Gavin is present Metropolitan titleholder, and Mrs. Jackson is a former national title-holder.

IT HAS BEEN reported from sources that if Jack Dempsey battles any of the present crop of European setups, action will be started immediately against him for obtaining money under false pretenses. And lawsuits are "the fraidest things that Jack is of."

THE REPORT that Gink Fowler has been signed by the Crackers was indignantly denied by President Spiller in a statement last night. Gink Fowler was an umpire and not a player, or at least so states Mr. Spiller. Mr. Spiller also denied that any member of his team, or any of the prospective members were professional marble shooters, and he also stated that he hoped that the party or parties that started this report would consume 50 pounds of lead and then go in swimming.

FANS HERE are of the opinion that President Spiller has been given a square deal with a marked deck, according to several letters that have come to our notice. First, there was the Cliff Markle decision. Then came the one regarding Erskine Mayer from the commissioner of baseball. Then a couple of ball players were signed, invoiced, received and paid for. The players were delivered in fair condition, but have failed to deliver. When his pitchers pitch, his batters afil to bat and his fielders fafl to field, or when one portion of this triple entente functons the other two fall down, with the result that the Crackers are now in the cellar position.

IT'S TIME for the race hounds to begin to figure the way the Kentucky derby is going. From this far distance it looks like Morvich will win in a walk. But distance may cause this illusion. Form sheets have caused many a young and promising burglar to give up a good trade and fall among thieves. After years of study, Professor Dingbat finally found that a horse which couldn't lose generally did.

BULLDOGS WIN SECOND GAME

BY HENRY DORMAN.

Athens, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—The offensive of the Bulldogs broke loose in all its fury in the second game with the University here this afternoon, three pitchers trying to stem the tide of hits that rained from the second through the eighth inning, and the Georgians swept the two-game series by winning the second contest, 11 to 7. Glenn Thomas pitched for the Red and Black and, save for two innings, the little righthander held the opposition in check with a variety of fast, slow and curve balls.

Stokes began the game for the Kentucky team, giving way to Fleaham, who twirled so well in yesterday's battle, but the southpaw's delivery was not the enigma to the Bulldogs that it was in his five-hit game, and he gave way to Slomer in the seventh. The Kentucky captain did little more than lob the ball over the plate, the local team batting his delivery at will.

Kentucky started off strong in the first with a bunch of hits that netted her four runs, while the Georgia team made only one. The Bulldogs came from behind in the second, however, and proceeded to take the lead by scoring; they were never headed, scoring four more in the fourth on a fussilade of hits. Kentucky added one more to her four in the fourth, while her other two tallies came as the result of two circuit hits by Bean in the fifth and again in the eighth.

TECH FRESH. CLOSE SEASON

BY JOHN STATON.

The Tech freshmen baseball team has just completed a most successful season, considering the difficulties under which they worked. Under "Buck" Flowers they rounded into a real ball playing aggregation before the season was over.

The final records show that they won seven games, lost four and tied one, .636 for the season. To start off the season they have an 8-3 victory over the Commodore Feds. The team suffered disaster at G. M. C., in Milledgeville, being humiliated in two games. In the Gordon institute series, they fared a little better, winning one and losing one. Next came the series with Monroe A. and M., winning one game and tying the other. Improvement was the word in the Riverside fracas. They took two from Riverside. When G. M. C. came to Atlanta, they were much better than in the first meeting, splinting the two-game series. And to round out a good start they went to Gainesville and took two straights from the Academy. And that closed the season.

The freshmen team this year has developed some real ball players, men who will make a strong bid for varsity next year. Turner at short, and McDade anywhere, are the two prettiest fielding men developed. In addition, they both smack that old pill on the nose. Werner and Potts were in the money when it came to hitting well above three hundred. But Jerry Albright is the man who led the hitting. For the season his average is .373. He is one man who is very likely to fill up the gap caused by the departure of "Sox" Ingram and "Red" Barron.

Snead, Turner and Locklin made up a good pitching staff. And Snead hit above four hundred in the games, too. They all know how to pitch a baseball, and this year have gained some valuable experience.

RAILROAD RATES and "TRAFFIC UNITS"

Present freight and passenger rates are necessary because of present railroad expenses, not because of large railroad profits. In 1921, the N., C. & St. L. Ry., with the second largest receipts in its history, lost money.

In 1917, the average amount received by the Railway for hauling one ton of freight one mile was 1.01 cents. In 1921 it was 1.47 cents, an increase of 45.5%. Transportation costs per unit of service rendered in the same period increased about 81.6%.

Hauling a ton one mile is a "traffic unit." Carrying three passengers a mile is counted as an equivalent unit. For each dollar paid out the N., C. & St. L. in 1917 moved 132 of these units; in 1921, only 72 units.

Most railroad expenses are fixed by factors beyond the control of the railroad: wages by the United States Railroad Labor Board, the price of materials and supplies by market conditions. Every economy is being practiced to reduce expenses, and all railroads have applications before the Labor Board for a reduction in wages.

Until railroad operating expenses are reduced so that more units of traffic can be moved for each dollar that the public pays as rates, railroad rates cannot be reduced without peril to the public interest in an efficient transportation system.

"RED" McLACHLAN-JAKE ABEL BOUT CALLED A DRAW

Atlanta Battler Given Decision at the Finish But Refuses to Accept

Saginaw Fighter Richly Earned Verdict is Belief of Fuzzy Woodruff—Abel Takes Bad Licking From Start.

BY FUZZY WOODRUFF.

This is my personal notion of last night's ever to be remembered battle between Jake Abel, of Atlanta, and "Red" MacLachlan, of Saginaw, Mich.

MacLachlan beat Abel, beat him decisively, beat him unquestionably. He won every round of the ten, with the possible exception of the eighth, which might have been called even by a stretch of the imagination. He had Abel out on his feet after the fourth round. From that time on, Jake stayed by holding desperately, and by using every bit of his immense store of ring lore. His hands were moving, but that was all. From round four they were useless as weapons of offense. He couldn't have hurt Homer Powell, who is an extremely fragile bit of pugilistic clay.

Declines Decision.

For some strange and unaccountable reason, Johnny Glynn attempted to give the decision to Abel. He says he did not—that he attempted to call the fight a draw, but missed MacLachlan's hand and happened to raise Jake's. Anyhow he raised Abel's tired fist and there was a roar of Niagara and hungry lions that went up from the excited populace that was on the borderland of becoming an enraged populace.

To Abel's credit, be it said, he refused to accept the fruits of such a decision. "It's a draw," he managed to gasp to the referee, and then Glynn raised the hands of both fighters.

Now as to the decision. As I have said before, I think MacLachlan won, and won by a mile or two miles, or as many miles as he could possibly have won by, with Abel still conscious. But I also am just as firm in the opinion that John Glynn was honest in giving the decision the way he saw it.

Couldn't See Shade.

He said after the fight that he could not see where there was much shade for either man, and firmly declares that he never had any intention of giving Jake the decision.

The truth of the business is, a fight as hard as that one of last night is extremely trying on the referee. He gets flustered, particularly in a round as furious as that tenth between Jake and Red, and in that flustration he frequently makes a decision that he regrets within a fraction of a second after he has made it. I know. I've made 'em myself.

I have always believed in the unimpeachable honesty of John Glynn, and believe in it now. It is simply unfortunate, very unfortunate, that he booted one with the bases loaded.

After all, what's the difference, except to the small minority in the vast crowd that had sesterces at stake, and gambling on sporting events is ever to be frowned on. It was a great fight, greatly contested.

Never Looked Better.

Abel never looked better to Atlanta fandom than he did last night when he was taking a pasting that would have flattened any less stout-hearted and skilled old warior. That's the story. Abel is an old warrior. He was little more than a shell of his former self as he faced that terrible Scot.

He fought brilliantly for the first four rounds. He stood up to meet MacLachlan's rushes, stood the gaff gallantly and poked in punch after punch, but the red head was remorseless. He never permitted Jake to rest for even a second. On the infighting he punished Jake cruelly and that told in the long run.

Abel was retaliating with kidney punches, but though MacLachlan's back showed red, so did his eyes and he kept on top of Jake with renewed fury.

When the fourth round ended, MacLachlan had nothing better than a shade. When the fifth round ended, it was plain to everybody but Benny Friedman that Jake would be lucky to stay.

Jake knew it. Under the most severe punishment, he smiled, but his smile was that pained, wistful smile, that a brave man wears when he knows that he is going down to certain defeat and wants to meet it gamely.

The rest of the card was entirely spirited. In the semi-windup Paddy Crawford, a stablemate of MacLachlan's knocked out Pewee Burns in seven rounds, during which Pewee absorbed a world of punishment and inflicted but mighty little. He, too, stuck to his guns gamely.

NEGROES SAY MASKED MEN ATTACKED THEM

Fifteen masked white men broke into his home near Staham, Ga., beat him, robbed him of $20 and shot him twice, is the declaration of Will Peters, negro, who lies painfully injured in Grady hospital. He will recover unless infection develops in wounds that were left unattended for some time while he walked to Winder and rode from there to Atlanta. Another negro, George McClusky, has disappeared after telling of a similar occurrence Friday night, according to reports from Athens Tuesday.

Guy Thurman and Bailiff Mathis Stynchcomb, of Clarke county, both in a local hospital with serious bullet wounds, assert that Peters was shot when the two entered his home to arrest Tom Peters for chicken stealing, and the occupants of the house opened fire and than fled when the fire was returned.

At the hospital here Peters stated that masked men came to his house, asked for admittance, and, upon being refused, shot four times, hitting him twice. He fled from the house, made his way afoot to Winder, where he saw attorneys and instructed them to dispose of property he owns near Statham, and then came on to Atlanta for attention at the hospital.

This would then leave the matter of abandoning the conference up to the French and the others who were threatening to leave Genoa unless the Russians categorically accepted the terms.

FRENCH CABINET BACKS PREMIER.

Paris, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—The cabinet, presided over by President Millerand, today indorsed and confirmed Premier Poincaire's instructions to the Genoa delegation. It discussed various eventualities, notably that of modification of Article 7 of the memorandum to Russia, relating to property, made with a view to ensuring the adhesion of France and Belgium, but the government resolved to admit no compromise on this subject.

The ministry maintans that the rights of French citizens with regard to private property in Russia must be expressly and rigorously safeguarded and is only prepared to accept a clear text, without ambiguity coupled with undertakings on the part of the Moscow government giving real guarantees that the provisions will be carried out.

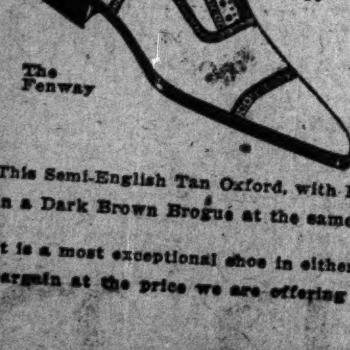

Even should the Belgian government, however impossible it may seem, accept the new formula, the French government will not accept it unless full satisfaction is vouchsafed on the question of private property which it considers of capital importance.

Course in Banking.

A brief course in banking will be undertaken within a few weeks by the junior chamber of commerce, according to announcement by Secretary Robert L. Troy. A series of seven lectures, one each week, by leading Atlanta bankers, will be given.

ANOTHER NO-HIT NO-RUN BALL GAME

Fort Smith, Ark., May 9.—Glen Harle, pitching for Fort Smith, of the Western association, hurled a no-hit, no-run game here today against Enid. Harle struck out eight batsmen and did not allow a man to reach first base until the eighth inning, when he walked two men, and another reached the initial sack on an error.

Harle came to Fort Smith in a trade with Springfield, Mo., last season. He also pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Okmulgee last year in his third game with the local club. Enid suffered its first defeat of the season today. The score was 3 to 0.

Bad First Inning Loses for Locals; Little Rock Wins Second Game 4-2

Visitors Make Four Runs in First on James, Who Hurls Great Game After This.

Today has been designated as Old Timers' day at Ponce de Leon baseball park, and all the old-time fans and all the old gentlemen in and around Atlanta are invited to the game, to be guests of the Cracker management.

The particular fan that started this day is an old gentleman who has attended every ball game at Ponce de Leon ball park for years and years, ever since "Silver Bill" Stickney can remember, which is several years. He has his own seat, locked with a padlock and a chain, and he has held this seat for a goodly number of years, refusing to turn over the key to anyone.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

The unique and the commonplace shared honors yesterday afternoon when the Crackers took a second beating at the hands of the visiting Little Rock Travelers, the count his time being 4 to 2.

The usual happened when the ancient and honorable Reuben Robinson received credit for the victory. The unique in that Rube was forced to give way to a relief twirler in the latter innings.

Reuben is seriously addicted to beating Atlanta teams. The outfits concocted in this southern metropolis have always found that licking Mr. Robinson was a physical impossibility, just like jumping off the Rocky mountains and landing with any degree of gracefulness and any great number of bones unbroken.

REUBEN VERY SHAKY.

But Reuben was shaky throughout the seven and a fraction innings in which he was charged with the responsibility of chunking baseballs for the Elberfeld clan. The rabbit's foot he has waved over local teams for years, the effectiveness which he used in dispatching Atlanta batsmen in the past were both missing and Reuben was sent to the soothing showers just in time to keep Little Rock from getting badly trimmed by the owners of the cellar position in John D. Martin's bunting chase. The cash customers gasped as Rube went toward the clubhouse. He isn't often knocked out hereabouts.

He was succeeded in the eighth by another southpaw, Cvengros, who, incidentally is mighty near the top in the matter of games won in the Southern league. Cvengros had the stuff that Reuben lacked, and the Crackers didn't have a chance.

Nothing was shown in the pitching line save southpaws. The locals' entry was Bill James, who pitched a corking good game after the first inning. The Travelers scored all their runs in this frame, and the battle was drawing to a close before they were able to collect another safe swat.

Travelers Start Attack.

In the opening stanza it appeared that nothing short of Providence would prevent the Travelers from staging another field day at the expense of James. He was wild, his support was faulty and the Rockers, seemingly, had their pinch-hitting clothes fresh from the presser's.

Zoellers walked for the starter. Leifer laid down a sacrifice bunt, but James' throw to first was low and Zoellers stopped at third. Schleibner walked filling the bases. Connolly then tripled between Mayer and Guyon. Barrett was an infield out, Ritter to Bernsen, but there was no advance. Jackson hit to Bernsen and Connolly was caught at the plate. Corrigan beat out an infield hit, driving Jackson to second. Brown hit to Schmidt, who fumbled and then threw wild, Jackson scoring. Robinson kindly ended the inning by going out, Graff to Bernsen.

Much to the surprise of the fans, the Crackers opened up on Robinson in the second and cut down the lead two runs. Dutch Bernsen slapped a single through short, but was forced by Ritter, Barrett to Corrigan. Ellam singled to right, sending Ritter to second. George Schmidt singled to right, scoring Ritter, Ellam stopping at third. Rariden sent a sacrifice fly to Connolly, Ellam scoring.

James' Best Inning.

The second, third, fourth and fifth innings found not a single Traveler on the paths, but after two were out in the sixth, Jackson tripled to the scoreboard. He died on third, however, as Corrigan was an easy out. Another hit came in the seventh when Robinson singled to right, but he didn't get beyond first. In the ninth, Jackson singled for the starter, but was forced out, James to G. Schmidt. Corrigan then stole second, but was left stranded.

out and Cvengros went to the mound. Mayer hit a long fly to Leifer in center and Holden, a right-hander, batting for Bernsen flied out to Connolly.

Birmingham, May 9.—The Barons cracked in the ninth inning today and Chattanooga scored four runs, winning, 6 to 4. Morrison had pitched good ball up until the final frame. AGOGAS BATTLE FAIR OUTFIT TODAY

The World's Fair and Agogas will play in Covington today. This is a postponed game between these two teams, the battle being rained out last Wednesday.

Much interest is being taken in this game, as four players, Vandergriff, Mills, Bailey and Walley Smith are popular favorites in Covington.

Sanford Steadman, who is looking after the Covington end of the game, is predicting that one of the biggest crowds ever seen at a ball game in Newton county will turn out to see this game.

Mr. Steadman stated over the phone last night that it looked as if everybody and his brother would be there this afternoon.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow entered Bowdoin college at the age of 15.

New Player Is Regarded As Great Base Stealer; Hit 289 in Western Loop

Chicago Cubs Come Through With Real Pastimer—Study of Records Shows That He Has Every Earmark of a Star.

BY MIKE THOMAS.

The first tangible result of President R. J. Spiller's trip east in search of players will show up at the Ponce de Leon ball orchard immediately when Second-baseman Klugman reports here from the Chicago Cubs. Klugman is being sent to the Crackers for further seasoning, having jumped from the Western association into the National league last year. He lacked the experience to take up the pace that the big timers set and as a result he was shunted to the Crackers with a large healthy cable attached to him.

Last year Klugman played with the Springfield, Mo., team, where he hit .289 in 142 games and fielded .939. His speed in the base paths is the thing that will make him a very valuable addition to the Crackers, he having pilfered 39 bases for Springfield last year. And this speed was the thing that carried him to the big leagues. From reports reaching these parts he will make a great running mate for Joe Guyon.

President Spiller stated that Klugman was merely the advance guard of the forces that have been recruited to bolster up the team and also that Klugman will arrive in time for the game Thursday.

Klugman at Second.

President Spiller said that it was the intention of the management to use Klugman at second base for the present, and that if present plans for the getting of another big leaguer for the second base position, or even if Herman Bronkie were to join the club, that there was the possibility that Klugman would be moved over to the short field position, but that George Schmidt would continue in this place for the present, at least.

The showing that Schmidt has made in the last two games has been fine, and practically every fan has seen that he is one of the most finished fielders that the Atlanta club has had on its roster in recent years. Schmidt gets the easy ones without any seeming effort, and he even makes the hard ones look easy. His good work so far has been a revelation to the management. His hitting has improved wonderfully, as is shown by his garnering two safeties in each game against the Little Rock club. This old argument against his playing regularly has been nullified and he looks like a good bet for a steady berth.

Spiller's Worries.

The only worry that President Spiller has now is the arrival of some reinforcements for his pitching staff and the getting of an outfielder of the right caliber. The local management is not at all pleased with the showing of Bill Holden so far, and since the pruning time is slipping up on all the clubs something in the way of real ability is going to have to be shown or the guillotine is going to descend on some prominent necks. While it is true that Holden came in here without the advantages that come from spring training, still it seems that he should be able to get into shape in a month.

OGLETHORPE EVENS SERIES

Starkville, Miss., May 9.—(Special.)—Oglethorpe University evened up the series with the Mississippi Aggies by winning today's game 4 to 1 in a fast contest which was featured by the heavy and opportune hitting of the visitors. Both Austin and Morris were hit rather hard, although the Oglethorpe twirler was more effective in the pinches, and received better support from his teammates.

A. & M. had numerous chances to score, but only in one inning were they able to cross the home plate The Maroons scored first, Turner leading off with a single to the left field in the second inning. Fowler sacrificed him to second and Rawls' infield out placed him on third, from where he scored on Cobb's single over short. Oglethorpe took the lead, however, in the fourth inning, scoring three runs by oportune hits after Oglethorpe had gotten runners on first and second base as the result of Little's muff of a high infield fly and slow work by Austin in fielding Kemp's bunt. H. Partridge stole third and scored a moment later on Sampson's single between short and third. Bryant moved both runners up with a sacrifice and a hit by J. Partridge brought in two more scores for Oglethorpe.

RADIO DEPARTMENT

WGM WILL SEND ORCHESTRA MUSIC

Georgia Symphony Organization to Furnish Program Tonight for Radio Service.

The Georgia Symphony orchestra hasn't been organized so very long, but when it comes to real music it surely can give that and that's what The Constitution is going to give radio enthusiasts at 9 o'clock tonight when the orchestra plays for WGM.

The orchestra is composed of six people and every one of them knows how to make harmony. The members of the ochestra are Frank Kutscher and Tommy Jackson, saxophone players; Ellis McClelland, trombone players; Mrs. Louise Hussung, pianist; Barge McCormick, violinist, and Roy Freeman, who handles the drums and traps.

As this program is being broadcast by WGM it will be received over a private cable pair at the Auditorium where it will be amplified with the use of a loud speaker furnished by the Merriam-Hall radio service. Both Monday and Tuesday nights crowds assembled around the booth occupied by The Constitution to hear the concerts and new market service which was received at the Auditorium just as it was being broadcast from WGM.

The orchestra for tonight has arranged a program of six numbers, each one of which is attractive and should be a treat to radio enthusiasts.

The first number by the orchestra will be "Sweet Man of Mine." Second on the program will be a quartet number, "Wyoming," played by Mr. Freeman, Mr. Kutscher, Mrs. Mussung and Mr. Jackson. The other four numbers will be played by the entire orchestra and will be as follows: "Just a Little Love Song," "Venetion Love Song," "Pick Me Up and Lay Me Down in Dear Old Dixie Land," and "Suwanee River Moon."

ASKS DONATIONS FOR RADIO SET FOR HOSPITAL

Patients at the Georgia State Tuberculosis sanatorium, at Alto, Ga., have been anxious for some time to obtain a radi receiving set to get concerts given by WGM, and they are about to have one, according to E. L. Hardin, who is in charge of the sanatorium.

Already Mr. Hardin has obtained between $75 and $100 toward a set. The Capital Electric company has offered to furnish the necessary equipment at cost and about $100 more is needed to meet the price of the receiving set. Mr. Harding has asked that checks he mailed to him in care of the state tuberculosis sanatorium.

There are about 100 patients at the sanatorium who would be benefited by the installation of the receiving set.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS!

Radio Editor: Last night I heard some station at 9:30 o'clock, and he signed off at 9:55 o'clock. Can you kindly tell me who it was?—E. B.

Your question is about as definite as if you asked, "I saw a man standing in front of Joe's restaurant last night. Can you tell me who he was?" There may have been a dozen men standing out in front of the place at the same time. If you had given some kind of a description of the man, it might have served as a clue to his identity, but without it we are at a loss. There might have been a dozen stations operating at the same time on the night you mention, although you possibly heard only the one. If you knew its call letters we could tell you the name of the station you heard.

Radio Editor: Will the enclosed hook-up receive the music and stories from WGM? The coil is mounted on a tube 3 1-2 inches in diameter. A tap is brought out at 9, 13, 17, 23, 41, 55, 75, 100 and 135 turns of No. 24 wire.—P. M.

Your hook-up is all right, and if you have a good crystal you may hear WGM. We would advise that you get a fixed condenser and shunt it across your phones.

Radio Editor:—I am considering buying a crystal set and desire to choose one of the following, A, B, C, and D. Will you advise me through your column which one is superior in the matter of construction and receiving distance?—S. I. Z.

It is not good politics to answer such a question as you ask in this column but, from personal experience, set B seems to be superior.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

Lesson No. 38.

Receiving Tuners—The "Honeycomb" Coil.

The construction of single layer coils for reception of long wavelengths necessitates coils of large mechanical dimensions. To overcome these physical disadvantages, coils may be so wound as to provide the necessary amount of inductance needed to conform to long wavelengths, and at the same time afford the advantages of comparatively small dimensions.

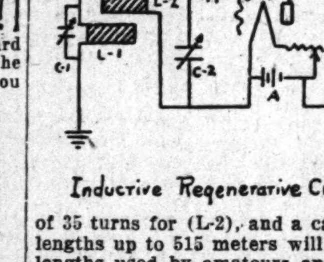

A type of tuning coil, widely used in receiving circuits, is known as the "Honeycomb" coil, and consists of multilayer coil in very compact form, so designed as to function with low energy losses.

These coils may be constructed in units, each with a prescribed number of turns, and the various sizes so designed as to present a range in wave-length between 200 meters and 25,000 meters.

The coils may be wound with solid wire or with a stranded conductor such as "Litzendraht" or "Litz" wire, as it is commonly known. In the ordinary type of coil with several layers, ohter than the honeycomb type, the capacity effect between urns causes considerable loss of energy. The mechanical arrangement of the windings in the honeycomb coil is such that one layer crosses the preceding layer at an angle, which reduces the losses, due to the capacity effect, to a minimum.

A certain type of honeycomb coil has an inside diameter of two inches, an outside diameter ranging from two and one-quarter inches to four and one-half inches, and a width of one inch.

An extremely flexible regenerative receiving set may be developed by the use of three honycomb coils in a three-coil mounting in conjunction with a vacuum tube detector. One of the coils is connected in the primary circuit, another in the secondary circuit, and the third connected in the plate circuit and used as a "tickler coil." By this arrangement an inductively coupled tuner is developed which has an inductive regenerative coupling between the grid and plate circuits. A diagrammatic arrangement of the circuit is shown herewith:

Inductive Regenerative Circuit

In this inductive regenerative circuit one of the honeycomb coils (L-1) is connected in the primary circuit and shunted by the variable condenser (C-1). Another coil (L-2), shunted by the variable condenser (C-2), is connected in the secondary circuit between the grid (G) and the filament (F) and the remaining coil (L-3) is used as the "tickler" coil and is connected between the plate (P) and the positive terminal of the "B" battery. If a coil of 25 turns is used for (L-1), a coil of 35 turns for (L-2), and a cail of 50 turns for (L-3), a range of wavelengths up to 515 meters will be obtained, thereby including the wavelengths used by amateurs and the 360-meter wave-length on which is radiated the popular "broadcasting" features.

In this circuit coupling is varied by swinging the primary coil (L-1) and the intensity of the signals is regulated by adjustment of the "tickler" coil (L-3).

By proper selection of other combinations of units containing a greater number of turns, the receiving set is easily adjusted to the longer wave-lengths.

H. E. MOODY HEADS CREDIT ASSOCIATION

H. E. Moody, manager of the R. M. Hollinshead company, Tuesday night was elected president of the Atlanta Credit Men's association, to succeed W. L. Percy, of the Dobbs & Wey company. Mr. Moody has just completed a term as vice president.

Other officers named at the association's annual meeting, held at the Peacock cafe, were E. R. Partridge, of the Hamilton-Carhartt company first vice president; Robert Strickland, Jr., of the Fourth National bank, second vice president, and C. E. Allen, of the Lowry National bank, treasurer. Directors were chosen as follows: M. E. Bodenheimer, J. H. Harland, W. C. Lovejoy, W. L. Percy, F. B. Ramey and L. T. Stallings.

The following men were selected to represent the local association at the national convention of credit men to be held in June at Indianapolis: Delegates, H. S. Collingsworth, H. D. Turner, W. L. Percy, F. B. Ramey, Robert Strickland, Jr., William Akers, E. S. Papy, H. E. Moody, W. C. Lovejoy and John B. Goodwin; and as alternates, B. M. Boykin, John H. Harland, P. P. Hanley and E. R. Partridge.

John H. Harland, chairman of the committee which has just finished a whirlwind membership campaign, reported that the body now has 265 members. The goal had been 250 members. Reports by various committee chairmen indicated that the association had a very active year.

Charles J. Haden, prominent Atlanta business man, was principal speaker, addressing the credit men on the income tax system proposed for Georgia by Governor Hardwick. He attacked the plan as being unfair. In California, he said, where practically the same system has been in operation for three years, the taxes have increased form $14,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Mr. Haden further said that in North Carolina, where a plan similar to that proposed by the governor has been in effect for two years, the tax burden has become so heavy that the state labor and farm organizations have adopted resolutions urging abolishment of the income tax and reestablishment of the ad valorem system.

NEW RAILROAD LINE REFUSED BY I. C. C.

Washington, May 9.—Because the Shreveport and Northeastern railroad had failed to present sufficient data, the interstate commerce commission today refused to allow it to construct from Minden, La., to Junction City, a new line of railroad 36 miles long on the Arkansas-Louisiana state line. The public service commission of Louisiana previously granted the permission for the construction.

The railroad proposed to spend $91,400 to complete the line, the commission's report stated, and to issue $400,000 in par value of new securities to procure funds. The estimate of expenditure was said by the commission to be probably too low and the data submitted as to the traffic possibilities of the territory was declared insufficient.

GIRLS OF BRENAU PERFORM FOR WGM

Big Program Given for Constitution Radio Service by College Girls From Gainesville.

Professional music-makers may be able to sing and play louder, but they can't play and sing much better than the members of the Brenau Glee club, which gave a special concert last night between 6 and 6:40 for WGM, the station broadcasting for The Constitution.

The Brenau girls were here yesterday for two appearances in their annual Atlanta show, which was given this year in the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium.

While the entire chorus did not participate in the radio program, the club was well represented by about fifteen members, who did solo and group singing and playing for WGM.

Preceding the concert, J. R. Smith, promient Atlanta real estate man, gave a short address, which was in compliments to the "own your home" exposition at the City Auditorium where The Constitution has installed a loud speaker to receive the radio service over cables from the concert room just as it is being broadcast. Mr. Smith spoke in place of William S. Ansley, who will speak Friday night.

Make Radio Hit.

The Brenau girls made a big hit with the radio audiences in Atlanta. Telephone call after telephone call at the conclusion of the program told of their success. They were trained by Wilford Watters, director of music at Brenau college, Gainesville.

The first two numbers by the Brenau girls were given by the mandolin and guitar club of the Glee club. The numbers were "Sweet Lady and Angel Child Medley" and "Got My Habits On." The club is composed of Grace Van Landingham, Alice Chaplin, Challie Milder, Catherine Reese and Mary Lou Bell.

The third number on the program was a solo by Miss Annie Beth Sessions. Miss Sessions has a wonderfully sweet voice and was well brought out in her number, "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses." She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Blanche Patterson.

The fourth number was taken from the show episode, "A Touch of Grand Opera." In this number Miss Willie Kimbrough sang "Caro Nome" from the opera, "Rigoletto." She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Patterson.

The mandolin and guitar club came in the fifth number again with a selection that was filled with enthusiasm. It was the "College Songs Medley."

Busters Give Numbers.

Concluding the Brenau program were two numbers by the Brenau Busters, the college jazz orchestra. It is composed of Nina Bizelle, Catherine Reese, Ruth Owings, Margaret Gratten, Doris Deer and Sarah Gray. Their numbers were "One Hour More" and "Kitten on the Keys."

At 9 o'clock The Constitution sent out a mixed program consisting of five numbers on the Edison phonograph, the regular market and crop report and The Atlanta Constitution's radio news service.

Numbers on the Edison phonograph were interspersed with the reports and news. Two of the numbers were given Monday night and were repeated at the urgent reguest of several radio enthusiasts. Those played on request were "The Hindoo Chant," otherwise known as "The Song of India," in a violin solo by Marte de la Torre, and "Memories of the South," a piano solo medley played by Ernest L. Stevens.

Other numbers played on the Edison phonograph were "Bygone Days" (Friml), a violin solo by Marte de la Torre; "Voci di Primavera" (Strauss), played by Armand Vescey and his Hungarian orchestra, and "Songs My Mother Taught Me" (Dvorak-Powell), a violin solo played by Vasa Prihoda, with pianoforte by Asta Doubravska.

Heavy Shipments

Savannah, Ga., May 9.—(Special.)—Big cotton shipments for the first few days in May, caused by those Savannah Brokers who have elected to sell on New York futures, brought a flurry of May business along the bay today.

Over 15,000 bales of cotton have been shipped out of Savannah coastwise during this month. The obvious reason for this substantial increase in shipments from Savannah is the fact that New York May futures are selling higher than cotton is bringing in Savannah.

Most of the cotton being sold in New York is delivered on contracts.

New York, May 9.—A sharp opening advance carried all deliveries into new high ground for the movement in the cotton market today owing to reports of further heavy rains in the western belt and favorable trade advices. The advance to 19.80 for October and 20.35 for May contracts met a good deal of realizing, however, and there were reactions later in the day with May selling off to 19.70 and October to 19.40. October closed at 19.43, compared with 19.53 at the close yesterday, with the general market closing steady, net one point higher to 19 points lower.

The opening was firm at an advance of 10 to 47 points on the higher Liverpool cables and private reports of continued heavy rains in Texas and Oklahoma. May was relatively firm, although 77 notices were issued, making total tenders of over 62,000 bales so far this month, and there was active general buying of the later deliveries. Profit-taking was heavy from the start, and as soon as the initial buying orders had been supplied prices turned easier.

After showing reactions of some 20 to 30 points, the market steadied up again on the detailed weather reports showing fully the expected rains in the southwest and the outlook for continued unsettled weather, with showers working into central belt sections. The buying was less active and general than recently, however, and the market eased off again during the afternoon on renewed realizing, with July declining from 19.80 to 19.29 and December from 19.83 to 19.40. Last prices were within a few points of the lowest. Liverpool atributed the sharp advance there to increased trade buying, favorable reports from Manchester, and unfavorable crop advices from the south.

Further overflows were reported in the lower Mississippi valley and Texas, while the detailed weather reports showed precipitation ranging up to over six inches at Weatherford, and there were numerous complaints of delayed farm work. A telegram from New Orleans said there was an active spot demand there, but local brokers reported a good deal of reactionary sentiment around the local ring, and it was rumored that old longs were taking profits freely.

LOSSES SUFFERED IN NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, May 9.—Liquidation on the long side by traders who wanted their profits was the strongest influence in the cotton market today, and it drove prices down to moderate net losses following wide upturns in the early session, these upturns being due to continued heavy rains in Texas and Oklahoma, the weather bureau noting rainfall up to nine and a half inches in the former state. Lowest prices came late in the day, when the trading positions sank to levels to 11 to 17 points under the final prices of yesterday. The close was at net losses of 10 to 17 points. July sold down to 18.90c and closed a point from the bottom.

The opening was excited, with buying orders coming from all directions, being stimulated by a much better Liverpool market than due and by the moisture in the west. The initial rise carried the market to its highest of the day, July rising to 19.45c, and the list to gains of 31 to 44 points. Realizing by recent buyers almost immediately set in, checked the upturn and soon caused small reactions, but for a considerable period the market gave ground only grudgingly, being supported by a constant stream of crop complaints from the two western states. A feature of these complaints was the claim that a vast amount of replanting would have to be done and that seed was getting very scarce.

It was not until the last hour of the session was entered that net losses were established, and they were the result of a decided increase in offerings from the long side.

News, Views And Reviews

Afternoon Stock Letter.

The market rallied a little this afternoon, but the recovery was not exactly impressive. We believe, however, that during the earlier selling today the market looked weaker than it really was. There was something more than professional selling, but nothing of what might be called serious liquidation.

Mexican Petroleum, Baldwin, Studebaker and steels acted well. Early in the afternoon it looked as if the rails were being used to bring on a rally, but New Haven was the only one that stood out.

This is a technical reaction, and while the overbought condition in some directions has been pretty well corrected, we rather except further irregularity before the market straightens out.

DOREMUS, DANIEL & CO.

Morning Stock Letter.

Bearish on the surface but bullish underneath perhaps best describes the majority speculative attitude toward the market. The break in B. D. L. is pointed out as an example of what can happen in active speculative stocks when an outside uninformed following becomes over-extended and inside support is withdrawn. We do not believe, however, that the particular case is typical of the state of the whole market.

Thus far selling has accomplished little else than to catch some stops and the amount of effort on the reactionary side to date has not been compensated by the results gained.

We believe that conservative, authoritative interests are still bullish, but for the time being speculators who consider prices only and not fundamental cause and effect may be able to hold a limited advantage.

When the soviet reply is given it will be possible to answer definitely the question of the influence of the conference on the market.

The Genoa conference was not the reason for the advance in the market, and, in the event of an absolute failure there, whatever selling there might be, in our opinion, could not be sustained or prolonged with Genoa as the sole reason or excuse.

Cotton Letters.

New York, May 9.—(Special.)—Price-fixing by Manchester spinners caused a sharply higher Liverpool this morning which our market failed to meet in spite of continued heavy rains in north and central Texas. Large realizing orders made their appearance on the opening. Considering the volume of cotton which has been sold today in the form of profit-taking, the market has acted remarkably well. These rains in Texas are most important, coming on the top of the heavy precipitation of last week, and once more delay the crop in that state. Of course, after such an advance as has been witnessed here in the past two weeks, a reaction could be expected at any moment, but such reactions will be entirely of a technical character and do not change the fundamental fact that the crop is off to such a late start that the question of supply in face of constantly improving business conditions throughout the world may be a most serious matter this coming season.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

The market has absorbed a tremendous amount of profit-taking today at levels well above last night's close. Forecast is for continued unsettled weather in the west, and for present unsettled conditions to advance further eastward, but just behind this wet spell are indications of the resumption of fair weather which may serve to check the advance or even cause some minor recessions, but we believe it advisable to make additional purchases on all such recessions as may occur.

"NATIONAL DISABLED SOLDIERS' WEEK" PLAN

Washington, May 9.—President Harding and the state governors will be asked to set aside the week of May 28 to June 3 as "National Disabled Soldiers' Week," Samuel J. Reed, chairman in charge of the plan of the National Disabled Soldiers' league, announced today. Other organizations working in behalf of disabled veterans have been invited to participate in the movement.

The purpose, Mr. Reed said, is to set aside a week during which the "disabled soldier question shall receive the concentrated interest of every citizen" toward "alleviating the suffering of individual disabled men and their families." It is proposed to urge passage "of the very necessary legislation covering the disabled soldier situation," to advocate "immediate adequate hospitalization," and to provide employment for wounded veterans who need jobs.

FORMER PRINCESS SENTENCED TO PRISON

Moscow, May 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—The former Princess Gagarin has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment by a soviet court here because, while an agent of the Cheka, or government police, she acted as adviser to the Most Rev. Dr. Tikhon, patriarch of Russia, who is shortly to go on trial charged with obstructing the requisitioning of church treasures by the government.

According to Russian newspapermen, Mme. Brusiloff, daughter-in-law of General Brusiloff, was the woman sentenced to death yesterday along with eight priests and two laymen, for having opposed the requisitioning of church treasures and for alleged participation in disturbances.

PRICES SLUMP IN GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, May 9.—Wheat averaged higher in price today, helped by reports of improved call from domestic millers and by talk of revival of foreign demand. Close, however, was unsettled, 1-2c net lower to 1-4c advance, with May $1.38 1-2 to $1.38, and July $1.23 5-8 to $1.23 3-4. Corn lost 1-2c to 7-8c, and oats 1-8c to 1-4 and 3-8c. In provisions the outcome varied from 10c decline to 15c advance.

Word that flour business was picking up somewhat came from Minneapolis and Toledo as well as Chicago millers, and did a good deal to bring about the upward swing which started in the wheat market soon after the opening. There was also some buying of May wheat here for millers, who were removing hedges' gossip about better export business in wheat, which was based partly on news of return of high prices for potatoes. Besides, upward of 1,000,000 bushels of wheat, mostly Canadian, were said to have been taken today for Europe at the seaboard.

Considerable evening up of trade to prepare for the government crop report, after the close, tended further to aid the bull side of the market. The official estimate of the probable yield, however, was about as generally expected. Some weakness which developed in the market just before the close was ascribed to selling on the part of longs. Deliveries on May contracts today were only moderate, 111,000 bushels, but receipts were large, 423 carloads.

Crowded conditions of elevators here tended to curtail local buying of corn and oats. Assertions that 750,000 bushels of corn had been sold to exporters failed to act as an offset.

Provisions at first had an upward slant in line with hog values, but later weakened somewhat as a result of commission house selling of lard.

CULTIVATION OF GEORGIA CROPS IS FAR BELOW NORMAL

Conditions in Southern Section Best in State, Says U. S. Bureau Report

BY MARION KENDRICK

Cultivation of Georgia crops up to May 1 is far behind the same periods of normal years, only 73 per cent of plowing, in comparison with the usual 81 per cent, having been accomplished, according to the monthly bulletin of the United States Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates issued to The Constitution Tuesday night. "Only once in recent years has the state average been so low," the report asserted, "while in the Piedmont region never before has so little been accomplished.

Conditions in the southern part of Georgia are much better than those of the north section. Less than half of the cotton has been planted in the upper third of the state and hardly one-third of this is up to a stand. In the same territory the condition of corn is even worse. Planting of cotton practically has been completed in the state below the Montezuma line with more than two-thirds up to a stand and thirty per cent chopped out. The condition of the crop is best in south Georgia and gradually becomes worse as the fields extend northward.

Less fertilizer is being used this year, according to Z. R. Pettet, statistician, who prepared the bulletin. Approximately 20 per cent of the fields are under cultivation without fertilizer. This has been brought about by the inability of many tenants to secure fertilizer and he unwillingness of owners to advance funds on account of the present "unfavorable outlook," it was stated. Reports to the bureau indicate that about 85 per cent of the amount used in 1921 has been placed in the ground this year. Sales are continuing, however, and Mr. Pettet stated that he believes the 1921 tonnage will be equaled and may be exceeded.

Crops other than cotton and corn have an outlook that is "far from promising," according to the bulletin. Wheat prospects diminished by 10 per cent during May with the condition figures still falling. Oats and rye approach the average condition.

District Conditions.

Progress of planting in corn and cotton by districts is summarized as follows:

Northwest Georgia: Plowing, 46 per cent; planting of corn, 20 per cent; cotton, 41 per cent; cotton up, 4; fertilizer used, 94; cotton without fertilizer, 10.

North central Georgia: Plowing, 60; planting of corn, 35; of cotton, 63; cotton up, 24; fertilizer, 84; without fertilizer, 19.

Northeast Georgia: Plowing, 56 per cent; planting of corn, 22 per cent; of cotton, 55; cotton up, 18; fertilizer used, 80; without fertilizer, 18.

Mid-west Georgia: Plowing, 71; planting of corn, 51; of cotton, 61; cotton up, 31; fertilizer used, 68; without fertilizer, 29.

Mid-central Georgia: Plowing, 81; planting of corn, 72; cotton, 87; cotton up, 51; fertilizer used, 68; without fertilizer, 25.

Mid-east Georgia: Plowing, 85 per cent; planting of corn, 88 per cent; cotton, 91; cotton up, 67; fertilizer used, 81; without fertilizer, 16.

Complete Report.

The report in full is as follows:

"Only 73 per cent of Georgia plowing had been accomplished by May 1. The usual amount at this time is 81 per cent. Only once in recent years has the state average been so low and never has so little been accomplished in the Piedmont at this time of year.

"Less than half of the cotton has been planted in the upper third of the state and a negligible amount is up to a stand. Corn is even farther behind than cotton. In the southern portion conditions are very much better. Planting is practically completed from Montezuma southward and more than two-thirds of the cotton is up to a stand, with perhaps 30 per cent chopped out.

"In the south the stands are fair to good with excellent appearance in restricted localities. As the traveler progresses northwest the general averages deteriorate to fair, with many ragged fields.

Nearly 20 Per Cent.

"Nearly 20 per cent of the fields have been planted withor fertilizer. While the landowners are able to finance the purchase, many of the tenants have been unable to secure it, and the owners often unwilling to advance funds with the present unfavorable outlook. Reporters indicate that about 85 per cent of the amount used last year will be used, but the sale is continuing and will probably equal or exceed the tonnage of 1921. A considerable number are mixing their own ingredients this season.

"The outlook for other crops is far from promising. During the past month the wheat prospect diminished by ten per cent or more and the condition figure is constantly falling. Rust has been worse than at any time during the past decade. The per cent abandoned from this cause alone is 9. Oats and rye are in better shape and approach the average. The harvest has progressed as far north as Americus.

"To add to the farmers' troubles work stock is in poor shape.

New York, May 9.—The bond market continued to be influenced today by uncertain conditions in the stock list, although showing only sporadic heaviness. Liberties were fairly steady on greatly reduced dealings, but French and Belgian government issues ea sed and Danish municipals again lost ground.

United Kingdoms were firm, Mexican government 4s and 5s displayed pronounced s trength, and buying of Rio de Janeiro 8s and Chinese railway 5s contributed to the better tone of these issues.

Domestic rails were most erratic, the uncertian trend of those bonds applying al ike to investment and speculative issues. St. Paul refunding and convertible 4½s, Missouri Pacific 4s, Baltimore and Ohio 4s, Norfolk and Western 6s and New Haven 6s featured the stronger bonds.

St. Louis and San Francisco incomes, Erie general 4s, Chicago and Alton 3½s, St. Paul general 4s, Pere Marquette 5s and Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 4½s eased. The same uneven tone was shown by utilities and industrials werealmost featureless. To tal sales, par value, were $16,743,000.

Coffee.

New York, May 9.—The market for coffee futures was lower today. The buying inspired by recent reports that valorization plans were to be continued and that financing arrangements had been arranged appeared to have been supplied during the past two or three days, leaving the market in an easier technical position. The rather unsettled showing of the Brazilian cables prompted realising under ahese conditions, and after opening five to nine points lower active months sold 15 to 21 points below yesterday's close with July selling at 10.05 and September 9.62. The close was at the lowest showing a net decline of 17 to 22 points.

Sales were estimated at about 67,000 bags. May, 10.21; July, 10.03; September, 9.61; October, 9.55; December, 9.43; January, 9.42; March, 9.39.

Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7s 11¼. Santos 4s 14½@14¾. Cost and freight offers from Santos were a shade lower including 3s and 5s at 13.90 to 14.35 for prompt and at 13.40 to 14.00 for forward shipments. There were no fresh offers from Rio or Victoria.

The early cable reported a decline of 100 to 150 reis in the Rio market with Santos unchanged to 100 reis lower. Special cables were received later reporting a decline of 50 reis to an advance of 175 reis in the Rio market, but the dollar buying rate was 70 reis higher and there was a decline of 3-32d in Rio exchange on London. Brazilian port receipts 40,000; Jundiahy receipts 21,000.

Sugar.

New York, May 9.—The raw sugar market was more active today and while there was a dittle steadier feeling in forward shipments, Porto Ricos, prices generally were unchanged. Cubans were quoted at 2⅝c, for spot and near positions, equal to 3.98 for centrifugal, with June at 2 ¼c, cost and freight, equal to 4.11. Porto Ricos spot 3.86 and later shipment 3.92 to 3.98. There were sales of about 300,000 bags of Cubas for June shipment and 12,000 bags of Porto Ricos in port, 6,000 bags prompt and 60,000 bags May and June shipment at quoted prices.

The raw sugar futures market was steadier early and prices advanced 1 to 4 points during the early operations on covering and buying believed to be for outside account.

The advance attracted considerable realizing and trade selling and prices eased off later, closing unchanged at 1 point net higher, July, 2.65; September, 2.84; December, 2.88; March, 2.83.

The market for refined was firm and prices were advanced 5 points by one of the leading refiners. Others, however, made no changes with fine granulated now ranging from 5.30 to 5.40. The demand was more active.

Refined futures nominal. Closing: July, 5.90; September, 6.10; December, 6.00.

London Money.

London, May 9.—Bar silver 35⅝ pence per ounce. Money 1½ per cent. Discount rates, short and three months bills 2¾@5-16 per cent.

Bears Control Stocks Although Big Trading Trend Again Resumed

BY R. L. BARNUM
Constitution's New York Financial Correspondent.

New York, May 9.—To those who watch the stock market closely without taking part, the game seems very much like watching football from the side line. For day after day recently traders working for an advance were able to get prices higherly merely by bucking the line. Then came the time when ground could be gained in this way no longer. For a whole week, despite the milling by pool leaders who wanted to see higher prices, the market stood still. Then there was a try at kicking the goal from the field. But the ball was lost. After twenty-six consecutive million-share days for five-hour sessions, the market dropped yesterday below the million-share market. That was the signal for the other side to take the ball.

It did.

Today was another million-share day, but with the bears instead of the bulls in possession of the ball. There were more converts today from the bull to the bear side of the stock market than for any day since the upward price movement began to hesitate. It was on Saturday, April 29, that the great spring rise of 1922 terminated. That is now plain by looking back. From the side line it appears that the stock market has outrun the improvement in general trade, and the improvement in the money market. Few people here believe that the high prices for 1922 have yet been reported. It is also hard to find those who are of the opinion that any great setback is now immediately ahead. There are now plenty of people in Wall street, however, who do believe that there is a traders' market ahead, with the price trend downward.

A number of the big traders in Wall street who made money on the short side of the stock market last year, and who began to get bullish in the late summer or early autumn, have within the past few days again turned to the short side.

Wall street, that is the speculative element, pretended today to be greatly alarmed over the prospects for a smash-up at the Genoa conference. That, however, was not the reason for today's decline in the stock market. A week ago, or two weeks ago, speculative Wall street was paying absolutely no attention to the predictions then being made by Lloyd George that Europe was again threatened by war. Heads were also wagged sideways today at the threat made by Senator La Follette to call for immediate action on his tabled motion demanding an investigation of the proposed merger of seven independent steel companies.

Another Oversubscription.

While the exact figures are not yet available it is officially announced that the offering of $75,000,000 twenty-year 4 1-2 per cent tax exempt land bank bonds at par was heavily oversubscribed. From the viewpoint of a very rich man who must pay heavy income taxes unless his money is very carefully invested these bonds bearing 4 1-2 per cent net, are of course very attractive. Many of the subscribers were bond houses doing business with the investing public.

One of these old-line bond firms says in its circular sent out today to clients "the supreme court of the United States has held that these banks were legally created as part of the banking system of the United States, that the bonds issued by the banks are instruments of the United States government."

That word instrumentalities is elastic. The land bank bonds are good. But the facts are that they do not have the same rank as United States government bonds. The open market prices are proof of that statement.

To Re-open Shops.

New Haven will within the next few days re-open its New Haven repair shops to hire 3,000 men and run at full capacity. The feeling here is that New Haven has turned the corner.

Steel ingot production for the month of April for thirty companies turning out eighty-four per cent of the 1920 production was 2,439,246 tons, an increase of 68,495 tons over March and the largest monthly production since July of 1921, when the figures were only 803,376. For April of last year ingot production for these companies was only 1,213,958 tons.

Compared with a year ago, with March of this year and with July of last year April production of this important unit of the steel industry is highly encouraging. But comparison with the gain reported for March tells another story. For March the gain was 625,729 tons. It is very heavy monthly gain for March reflecting recovery from trade stagnation could hardly be continued unless there was improvement in the general situation which even the stock market has not discounted.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

The Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday bill at Keith's Lyric theater has an ensemble of six big-time Keith vaudeville acts on the program, headed by Henry's Melody Sextette, six lovely and attractive girls in a harmonious offering of songs and music. Each of the girls is a talented musician, and soloists offering a classical concoction of popular songs and melodies.

An extra added attraction billed on the program presentd by George Dameral and Myrtle Vail, assisted by Miriam Allyn, in a "musical satire" with comedy, songs and dances. Featuring Miss Vail's famous version of the "Hula-Hula" as danced by the native Hawaiians.

Other intersting acts are Edith Jane and Harold Miller in dance steps of the moment; Walsh and Bentley, novelty acrobats, and The McDonald Trio, sensational gymnasts.

"Dance-O-Mania."

(At Loew's Grand.)

"Dance-O-Mania," the spectacular dance revue heading the bill at Loew's Grand theater for the first half of the week, will terminate its engagement with tonight's performance, as on Thursday an entire new program will be presentd.

"Dance-O-Mania" is offered by five lively steppers and features Myron Pearl, a dancer of exceptional ability. Their numbers are principally whirling and acrobatic and are executed with rare grace.

Vee and Tully, in an equilibrists revue, are a mixed team consisting of a man and a woman, assisted by a wonderful dog, "Jackie." All their tricks are new and difficult, daring leaps and catches never before attempted by a woman, who in this instance does all of the understanding.

Other acts are "After the Honeymoon," a comedy domestic playlet; Beck and Stone, harmony singers, and Harry Sykes, in "African Opera." The feature of the screen is William Farnum in "A Stage Romance."

"Smilin' Through."

(At the Metropolitan.)

There is an interest in the extended engagement of the Norma Talmadge First National attraction, "Smilin' Through," at the Metropolitan, that is being reflected in the box office records. The beauty of the popular star and the wonder of her remarkable motion picture attraction has created a nation-wide interst equal to that registered here.

The splendid attraction, with the additional Metropolitan features, will be continued through the week, because of the marked rapidly growing attendance. Incidentally this is the first attraction that has been continued for two weeks at the Metropolitan.

"Orphans of the Storm."

(Next Week at Criterion.)

The public will have an opportunity next week to see D. W. Griffith's latest picture sensation, "Orphans of the Storm," a United Artists' release, will be shown at the Criterion theater. This is a tremendous photoplay builded upon the story of D'Ennery's old stage favorite, "The Two Orphans," and is Mr. Griffith's most ambitious effort.

He hopes by this picture to provide a contribution to history of the past, presenting it in an understandable, yet forcefully dramatic manner, whereby it might carry a warning for a future that can only escape mistakes of the past, by avoiding their cause.

Vaudette Theater.

Country store night, which again prevails tonight after the 7:10 vaudeville, is now popular with the Vaudette patrons, judging from the crowds that attend every Wednesday night, knowing that when they go there, and if they hold one of several lucky numbers that they take home a product which they enjoy at the management's expense, and also see the best musical comedy and vaudeville in town, and this week "The Springtime Follies" and Dorothy Gish in "A Ghost in the Garret," help to make the evening a pleasant entertainment.

MAYOR DEFENDS CITY GOVERNMENT

patters the mayor termed as "rot handed out to the people of Atlanta." Mayor Key declared the Hemlockers couldn't dominate the city if they wanted to, pointing out that the south side has all the wards but four and a vast majority in council.

He asserted that in the apointment of the charter commission he endeavored to divide the representation between the sections as fairly as he could, appointing the majority of citizen members from the north side and the majority of council members from the south side.

Defends Cut Council.

Strongly defending the Choate plan of reducing the council personnel, the mayor expressed the firm conviction that one representative from a ward, with legislative responsibility placed on him, would give better service than the three do now—that the present council operates under a "pass the buck, shuttle-cock" system.

Referring to the boards, he said there was a time when they attracted men of dignity, but not so much now and they have about lived out their usefulness.

Mayor Key urged more power for the mayor. He said that about the only authority a major has over anybody at city hall now is his secretary, stenographer and the porter; and the lack of constructive power in the mayor's hands has handicapped the city.

He defended his speech at the Southern railway shops last week for which the stand-pat forces severely scored him. He promised the railway employees a return to 5-cent street car fares, $1 gas and cheaper electric rates under the Choate charter. The stand-patters rediculed his promises and asserted that the railroad commission controls the utility rates.

"The railroad commission has legalized the plunder of our people," declared the mayor. "The Choate charter gives the city the right to build its own public utilities. You empower the people of Atlanta to say where gas mains ought to go and give them the power to build their own public utilities and then you'll see the utility rates go down." He charged the Georgia Railway and Power company with attempting to defeat the Kirkwood merger with Atlanta, "because it didn't want to give Kirkwood the advantage of Atlanta rates on gas and electricity."

Wants Fewer Heads.

Atlanta's government is usffering from too many heads now, according to the mayor, and a centralization under five departmental heads will bring about great improvement.

Mayor Key drew attention to the fact that the government of the United States operates under only seven heads, appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, just as the city chiefs would be named by the mayor and confirmed by council.

Turning his attention to the Watkins charter Mayor Key declared the 30 per cent school provision was not requested by the school department and was put in as a "vote catcher."

"I guess the most helpless and pitiful thing on this earth would be a mayor under the Watkins charter," he continued. "He wouldn't have any authority to do anything but just be mayor. He is the ceremonial mayor of the old chamber of commerce charter, ceremonial omitted."

In conclusion he asserted that Atlanta has not prospered because of her existing charter, but in spite of it.

Hugh M. Willet, chairman of the Choate campaign committee, followed the mayor and explained features of the charter in a brief talk. Dr. E. L. Daniel presided and introduced the speakers.

First Open Air Meeting.

No matter how the people of Atlanta vote on the city charter plan in the coming election, they eventually will adopt the city manager form of government because it is becoming established everywhere as the most efficient form of city government known, J. W. Greer, city manager of Tallahassee, Fla., declared Tuesday night at the first of a series of open air political meetings held in front of the Flatiron building on Peachtree street.

The meeting was a picturesque one in many respects. Members of the League of Women Voters headed by Mrs. H. B. Chambers and Mrs. Ada A. Perry were present and distributed literature extolling the merits of the proposed Watkins charter. They also worked personally with the people who formed the crowd in front of the Flatiron building.

Mr. Greer delivered the principal speech at the meeting. He was preceded by Paul Bryan, professor of law at Emory university, and H. K. Van Buren, former member of the faculty of Fulton High school, who spoke in behalf of the Watkins plan.

Mr. Bryan explained the merits of the city manager plan, declaring that it had been indorsed by former President Woodrow Wilson and other leaders of democratic thought. He told of its success in a large number of cities ranging in size from the smallest class to as large a city as Cleveland, Ohio. He expressed disapproval of many of the features of the present charter and of the proposed Choate charter.

Mr. Greer was presented, and disavowed any intention of coming to Atlanta to offer any criticism of the proposed new charter and of the old charter. He said he came as a guest of the Society of Engineers, and had agreed to make a talk telling of the success of the city manager feature of the Watkins-Atlanta plan at the request of representatives of the League of Women Voters.

"The city manager plan is not a one-man plan by any means, and I want you to take this into consideration when I talk of what has been done at Tallahassee. I'm only one of the hired hands, and if I don't make good the city commission can fire me instantly. When I first was called to Tallahassee I had been serving as city manager at Bryan, Texas, and the results accomplished there had attracted nation-wide attention. When I went to Tallahassee I had never seen the place before. I had no friends there and no enemies.

"The public utilities of Tallahassee had been operating at a monthly loss of $1,500. The city was bankrupt and the mayor had resigned. After I had taken charge as city manager the city cleared in its first month's operation of public utilities $600. At the end of the first year, February 28, 1921, the total net profit of the public utilities was $24,466. Today, at the end of the second year of the city manager plan, the net earnings of the city utilities have doubled. The tax rate has been reduced from 16 mills to 13 mills. We have a surplus of $20,000, and the city does not owe a penny. Every street in the town running in both directions has been reworked and we have installed a sanitary system that has made Tallahassee the cleanest town in Florida, if not in the entire south," Mr. Greer said.

Urges Competent Man.

Discussing the situation in Atlanta, Mr. Greer expressed confidence that the city manager plan could not fail here if a competent manager is selected.

"I would advise you to go out of Atlanta and select the best man you can find for the job," he said.

Mr. Greer then talked of work he had done with public utilities throughout the country, and declared that a city government is nothing less than a big corporation. He said all successful corporations employed the ablest men in their execcutive departments, and that a city, of all corporations, should adopt the same policy.

After Mr. Greer had spoken, Mrs. Pearce was introduced. She declared that the campaign for the Watkins plan charter is being run without money. She asked the people to make subscriptions, and a hat was passed and a generous collection was taken.

Mayor Speaks Tonight.

Tonight Mayor Key, Councilman Ashley, representing the present charter, and a speaker for the Choate charter will addiress a meeting of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, at the Labor Temple.

Mr. Ashley will speak to employees of the Southern railway shops at noon.

An open-air Watkins rally will be held tonight in front of Jacobs' pharmacy, 880 Highland avenue. J. L. McCord and others will speak. Music will be furnished by a brass band.

Friday night the Watkins adlherents will hold two fifth-ward rallies—one at Meador-Goldsmith school and the other on Sunset avenue.

Merry Maidens of Brenau Captivate Atlanta Crowd

Once in a great while Atlanta is extended the opportunity of witnessing in one of her playhouses an attraction that stands out pre-eminent over the rest, an offering laden with the fullest measure of melody, mirth, mischievousness, merry maids and miscellaneous music was that presented Tuesday night in the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium by the Brenau "Follies" under the auspices of the Brenau Glee club of 1922.

Everything musical, from the old-fashioned minuet to the ultra-modern jazz, from grand opera selections to the latest wrinkle in classic and semi-classic vocal and dance music, and dances in equally as great variety as the music was contained in the repertoire of the pretty college girls who, with demure shyness that distinguished them from experienced artists, completely captivated the large audience.

From the time the curtain was drawn aside until the final episode there was not a moment but what some demonstration of exceptional talent was displayed by the young women. Perhaps the outstanding feature of the two and a half hours of splendid entertainment was the beauty parlor ballet in which dainty Miss Margaret McCarroll, as the country girl, was transformed into a modern butterfly by a series of applications of witchery from the beauty parlor specialist, who enlisted the aid of the powder puff girls, the lip stick man, the coiffure witches and the fashion dolls.

After the transformation Miss McCarroll experienced little difficulty in enamouring anew her erstwhile sweetheart who had been ensnared by the wiles of the vamp. Leading parts in this episode were efficiently enacted by Miss McCarroll as the country girl; Miss Zeta Mae Burton, as the city man; Miss Lucille Mitchner, as the vamp; Miss Abbie Armitage, as the beauty parlor specialist; Misses Catherine Reese, Dorothy Stribling and Jane Hack, as the powder puft girls; Miss Ethel Bowers, as the lip stick man; Misses Mary Lou Bell, Mildred Edwards, Katherine McQuary, Janice Mayson and Louise Prewitt, as the coiffure witches; Misses Peggy McInnis, Challie Miller, Patty Epps, Helen Russell, Fischel Levinson and Elinor Reed as the fashion dolls.

Next in popular esteem, judging from the applause, was the touch of grand opera in which Miss McCarroll and Miss Willie Kimbrough, sang selections from "Rigoletto," and Miss Winifred Bird and Miss Abbie Armitage rendered numbers from "Faust." Of especial technique was the rendition of the "Jewel Song" from "Faust" by Miss Bird.

"Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses," a beautiful ballad rendered charmingly by a chorus of twenty girls, during which they danced out into the aisles of the house and distributed roses, made a decided hit.

Members of the mandolin and guitar unit demonstrated their finished ability in a well-arranged program of popular song hits. All told them the 1922 glee club of Brenau was one of the best college aggregations that has visited Atlanta in many months.

"Ocean-Going Pork Barrel," Term Applied To Ship Subsidy Bill

Washington, May 9.—An "ocean-going pork barrel" would be created by amendment of the administration ship subsidy bill, Benjamin C. Marsh, managing director of the Farmers' National council, declared at today's session of the joint congressional hearing on the measure.

Contending that the legislation would not provide adequate government control, Mr. Marsh said the bill would "license financiers to rob the American people." Retention by the government of ships now operated by the shipping board was advocated by the witness who said the income derived from rentals should be used to construct new ships.

DRUID HILLS HEIGHTS

TO a limited number who buy lots in DRUID HILLS HEIGHTS at our Booth in the "Own Your Home" Exposition at the Auditorium this week we will build their home at actual cost, according to their own plans and specifications. We have a competent builder, who will be at your service to do things as you wish, or you can have your own architect and builder.

POLICE BOARD ASKS FOR MORE AUTHORITY

The first step by the police board to secure more power in running the police force was taken Tuesday at the regular meeting of the board when resolutions were adopted requesting council to repeal ordinances regulating certain departments of the police.

Council will be asked to repeal the act which requires that one-fourth of the force be given a holiday once a week; the act giving traffic men every other Sunday off, and an hour and half for dinner each day while on duty.

The action of the board does not mean that one-fourth of the members will not be given a holiday once a week but means that the members of the board discussed the question act on this question. Under the ordinance passed by council, the men must take Sunday off. The members of the board discussed the question and decided that the request would be made of council as it might be best to give the men some other day off besides Sunday, as that is generally one of the busiest days of the force.

Silence Is Heavy After Robertson Visits Embassy

Washington, May 9.—Alexander E. Robertson, British war hero and alleged lover of Mary Culberson, daughter of the millionaire Texas senator, has visited the British embassy here and laid his case before Counsellor Craigie.

His fears that he would again be "kidnaped" because of his affection for the senator's daughter, once he set foot in Washington, seem to have been groundless. His arrival here was not attended by any escort, and so far as is known he made the journey from Newark, N. J., to the capitol unmolested.

His conference at the embassy was of long duration, and, it was thought he gave complete details concerning the attempt of three private detectives to kidnap him and railroad him out of the country. But embassy officials refused to comment on the visit and indicated they are inclined to suspend judgment and are determined to keep the matter secret for some time to come.

No less secretive are the Culbersons and Chesley E. Jurney, private secretary and political manager for the senator. The only rift in the silence has come from the senator himself, who has instructed his assistants to deny that he will make any statement on the matter. Jurney has returned to Washington, it was learned at Senator Culberson's office, but is denying himself to everybody.

Plan Day Nurseries In Police Stations For Chicago Kiddies

Chicago, May 9.—Chicago mothers can no longer frighten children into obedience with awesome threats that the "big policeman will get them."

Very soon, in fact, they will be taking the youngsters to the police stations and parking them for the day, because, according to plans of Health Commissioner Bundesen and Chief of Police Fitzmorris, every station will soon house a day nursery.

Thirty policewomen, who haven't been especially busy on police work, and perhaps some the police matrons, will have charge of the kids while their mothers work during the day.

Coal Operators Foresee Victory In Mine Strike

New York, May 9.—Coal operators are predicting that the strike in the bituminous industry "will be smashed before July 1," J. D. A. Morrow, vice president of the National Coal association, asserted during an address before the National Association of Manufacturers here today.

Non-union mines are producing 4,000,000 tons a week, he announced, and are daily increasing their output toward the 8,000,000 weekly tonnage required to supply the national needs. The present available supply of bituminous coal, Mr. Morrow placed at 47,000,000 tons.

In West Virginia, he said, "practically as much coal is being mined by non-union men during this strike as was mined during a similar period by both union and non-union in the state in 1920."

One hundred and nineteen mines are now operating in West Virginia alone, he said.

Mr. Morrow declared the operators are opposed to any form of nationalization of the coal industry.

This block of property has long been considered one of the finest sites in Druid Hills; and it is now being offered for the first time as a subdivision. Every lot is equipped with water, sewer and gas; connections have been run under the sidewalk to the property line so as to supply each lot.

The street car company has applied for permission to extend car service from the present terminus of the Ponce de Leon Avenue line out to the property which we are now offering for sale. We would be glad to show this subdivision to anyone looking for high-class building site at a reasonable price.
